

Beach Enjoys Crowds For Formal Opening

No Gas—No Tires—But Hot Weather Brings Them To The Beach Just The Same

Many Hotel Operators Enthused Over Season's Prospects

In spite of the fact that you can not procure automobile tires, you are only allowed three gallons of gasoline a week and there is a general dim-out on the water front, Virginia Beach is going just the same. The past week end, usually designated or considered the formal opening of the Beach as a resort, brought an overflowing crowd.

There did not appear to be a scarcity of automobiles, tires, or gas from surveys made. There has been some curtailment of amusements due to the dim-out order, but the Ocean still has its attraction, particularly over the week ends.

Many hostilities reported an overflowing number of guests and are optimistic over the season's prospects, even in view of many glooms that have been cast by rationing, black-outs and promised air raids.

Board Of Governors To Hold Meeting

The Board of Governors of the Woman's Club of Princess Anne County will meet Tuesday, June 9th, at 1:00 o'clock at the Pocomantas Hotel.

The following officers were elected at the annual meeting in May:

Mrs. Wallace Clark, President; Mrs. Don Seiwel, 1st vice-president; Mrs. A. E. Ewell, 2nd vice-president; Mrs. A. J. Ketsules, 3rd vice-president; Mrs. H. T. Cook, Secretary; and Mrs. H. G. Walker, Treasurer.

Comments And Resumes on War

Last January, an official announcement said that the United States Army would reach a total of 3,600,000 men by the end of 1942. Since then, the actual size of the Army and precise plans for its expansion have not been announced, inasmuch as they are military secrets of the first order. Some commentators have forecast that in time the Army might total nine or ten million. The best available information seems to indicate that a total of at least six million will be attained.

That is obviously going to have a revolutionary effect on the man power of this country. However, there is no factual evidence to support the scare rumors which say that every physically fit man under 36 is certain to be placed in uniform. Selective Service heads are making a genuine effort to create an Army of the size needed with minimum dislocation of American family life.

Here is how matters shape up at this time, according to published statements:

First, practically all available single men in the 20-35 age bracket have been called. Many who were given temporary deferment for occupational reasons are now being summoned. In time, women and older men will replace thousands of young men in defense industries.

Second, the Selective Service Boards are placing in the 1-A classification all men who have no genuine claim for dependency. That includes men with working wives, men who contribute little to the support of their households, and men with means. All of these men will be in uniform by the end of the year, unless they are unable to pass the physical examinations or perform vital work in war industry.

Third, it is universally believed that Congress will soon approve a bill providing government grants to dependents of service

Darden Names Planning Board

Governor Darden last week completed the personnel of the State Planning Board which will be headed by Dr. Francis P. Gaines, President of Washington and Lee University. Other members of the Board, which is composed of eight state officials, three citizens at large and one representative from V. I., are as follows:

James A. Anderson, State High way Commissioner; Dabney S. Lancaster, Superintendent of Public Instruction; J. H. Bradford, Director of the Budget; Dr. I. C. Riggan, State Health Commissioner; H. G. C. M. State Comptroller; L. M. Walker, Jr., Commissioner of Agriculture; William H. Stauffer, Commissioner of Public Welfare; Cassius M. Chichester, Director of the Division of Statutory Research and Drafting; Morton Wallerstein; Vernon E. Kemp, both of Richmond, and Dr. H. M. Young of V. P. I.

Final Meeting Og W. T. Cooke Council

The Princess Anne Council of Parents and Teachers met Wednesday, May 27th, at the Willough by T. Cooke School. Mrs. Harold T. Cook, president presided. The school presidents gave their annual reports and also all reports of standing committees were heard. All departments reported splendid work over the year.

The annual election was held at this meeting with the following officers being elected: Mrs. Harold T. Cooke, president; Mrs. Wallace Clark, vice-president; Mrs. Will Fentress, secretary; Mrs. Elsie Walker, treasurer.

A delightful social hour was enjoyed at the close of the meeting.

Princess Anne Garden Club Holds Final Meeting

The final meeting of the Princess Anne Garden Club for the season will be held Monday, June 8th at 3:00 p. m. at the home of Mrs. Maclin Simmons on 53rd Street. Miss Elizabeth Gregory Hill, president, will preside. Mrs. C. S. Sherwood will talk on "History and Use of Flowers."

The exhibit for the day will be lilies and garden flowers.

Inspection Seals Required June 8

So great a rush has developed at the official inspection stations that another week has been allowed by special order of the Governor for motorists to comply with the automobile inspection law. Because of this order, motorists will have until midnight, June 7, to have their cars inspected.

Previously, Col. M. S. Battle, director of the Division of Motor Vehicles, has instructed State Police to hale into court any motorist whose automobile did not bear the new red and silver inspection sticker by June 1. However, when it became apparent that it was a physical impossibility for inspection stations to complete their work, especially in such centers as the Hampton Roads cities, Blackstone and Radford, Governor Darden decided that an extension of time was necessary.

Everett School Holds Finals

The Everett School closed its session Friday with an entertainment rendered by Mrs. Richard Everett. A dinner party was given the upper grades and luncheon for the lower grades.

The highest awards in each class were won by Miss Maureen McGrath, 8th grade; Miss Charlotte Timberlake, 6th grade; Miss Claire McGrath, 5th grade; Miss Ann May, 4th grade; Miss Ann Grandy, 2nd grade, and Miss Barbara Gould, 1st grade.

Resort Owners Are Hopeful Of Prospects

At Virginia Beach the operators of Seaside air Casino have made extensive improvements in anticipation of a banner summer.

Prospects they say, are "very good," judging from interest shown to date.

Frank B. Shean, former director of amusements at the New York World's Fair, is the new manager of the casino. Improvements include remodeling of the bath houses, redecoration of the picnic pavilion and complete rebuilding of the ballroom.

This feature will be known as the MacArthur Room, with a large portrait of the general at one end, and the bandstand out over the ocean. The room will be completely dark from the exterior, and the inside will follow a South Sea Island motif in decoration.

The "Ronde-Voo" four-counter food and drink service bar, has been installed, and a new ride and three new concessions added. A modern sun deck is to be built over half of the former swimming pool area, and a bomb-proof air raid shelter will be erected in the other half.

At Beach Clubs Beach clubs and private dancing spots are facing the season with mixed outlooks. The Cavalier Beach Club anticipates a good summer, and has booked "name" bands through the first half of September to play in its tastefully decorated, black-out pavilion. The Surf Club, however, will not open this season. The Village Barn, Virginia Beach late spot, has announced that it will be open all summer as usual.

Thus if recreation makes for morale there'll be no blackout of that commodity here this summer.

Drive slow and the probability is that you will be driving longer

June 17 Night To Be Darkest Of War So Far

State Civilian Defense Officials Select Date For All-Night Blackout

State Civilian Defense officials announced this week the selection of the night of June 17 for Virginia's first all-night test blackout.

The blackout will go into effect with the approaching darkness that day and will continue until the dawn of June 18. All of Virginia, except possibly the counties west of Bristol, will be included in the test. That extreme southwestern tip of the State has been invited to participate, but its air raid warning service operates separately from the rest of Virginia and it was not known whether it would be linked up in the test.

J. H. Wyse, State Defense Coordinator, and John J. Howard, Chief of Air Raid Precautions, made the announcement after final plans had been worked out in accordance with a suggestion from the First Interceptor Command.

Sometime during the night, at an hour not to be announced in advance, there will be an air raid test, during which a complete blackout will be enforced except for certain essential industries, including the railroads. During the rest of the night traffic will be permitted to move with dimmed lights and persons may go to and fro without molestation. When the air raid test comes, however, traffic will stop, pedestrians will scurry to cover and dimmed lights will be doused.

Army observation planes will fly over the State to gather reports on the blackout's effectiveness. "The purpose of the blackout," OGD officials said, "is to ascertain how completely the entire State could be blacked out for a long period of time—such as has been necessary for nearly three years in England. It is the type blackout for which we must prepare."

War Production Demands Diets

"Dietary studies of workers' families in many sections of the country indicate that the average employed worker and his family consume meals far from adequate," states Milton Hult, president of the National Dairy Council.

The Committee Nutrition and Industry of the National Research Council reports that facilities for feeding worker in industrial cafeterias are very poor. Only one of 33 cafeterias surveyed was directed by a trained dietitian. Furthermore, workers were making poor choices even when wholesome foods were available. This evidence indicates that the nutritional status of industrial workers needs a lot of improvement.

Many employers have become suddenly aware of the importance of good nutrition for their employees and have become ready victims of the campaign being waged to sell synthetic vitamin concentrates. In some cases employees are passing out vitamin tablets to employees in an indiscriminate fashion in the hope of quickly raising the efficiency to a high level. Nutrition authorities are in agreement, however, that this practice is unwise and uneconomical. The nutritional needs of industrial workers can be met by the proper selection of common foods such as milk and dairy products, vegetables, fruits, eggs, meat, and cereals (either whole grain or enriched).

The nutritional status of industrial employees can best be improved by educating the worker and his family to buy and eat the right kind of foods. This can be accomplished by the institution of a community nutrition education program supplemented by the organization of factory owned cafeterias managed by trained dietitians. Vending machines selling soft services should not be used for milk and fruit juice. Research meal findings.

Mass Induction Of Navy Recruits Set For Sunday

A nation-wide public ceremonial for the induction of new recruits into the Navy will be held next Sunday, June 7, at 2:25 p. m. EWT, exactly six months to the minute after Japan's attack on Pearl Harbor, it was announced yesterday by Chief Electricians Mate F. D. Tremaine, assistant officer in charge of the Norfolk recruiting office.

The ceremonial will be conducted from Washington over a radio hookup, and the oath will be administered to all recruits simultaneously. Men wanting to be among those to be inducted at once, Chief Tremaine said.

Meanwhile, arrangements will be made in Norfolk for admitting the general public to this memorable event.

Richard Broun Is V. P. I. Graduate

Richard G. Broun, son of Mr. and Mrs. George S. Broun of Princess Anne County, received his degree in mechanical engineering from the Virginia Polytechnic Institute, in Blacksburg last week. After graduating from Kempsville High School Broun attended the Norfolk division of V. P. I. In Blacksburg he has served as secretary of Pi Delta Epsilon, corresponding secretary of Pi Tau Sigma and was elected to hi Kappa Phi and Tau Beta Pi.

Typhoid Clinic At Health Center

Dr. Leake, Health Officer of Princess Anne County, announced this week that beginning today inoculations will be given against typhoid at the Health Center at Virginia Beach between the hours of 2 p. m. and 4 p. m. The second inoculation will be given between the same hours on June 12th.

The Health Center is located at 19th street and Arctic Ave.

Executive Order On Motor Trucks

Governor Darden this week announced that an Executive Order is now being prepared setting forth the minimum load limits on all commercial motor vehicles according to the limits which have been recommended by the Public Roads Administration in Washington and by the highway officials of a majority of states.

His action follows the request from the War Department that each state permit all commercial motor vehicles to be loaded and operated to the full extent of their capacity within uniform limits. These uniform limits will be operative not only for motor vehicles directly engaged in transporting materials for prosecuting the war effort; but also for commercial motor vehicles generally for the duration of the war. The War Department gave as the reason for the request that "the maintenance of existing varying state standards will result in tying-up an undue amount of motor vehicles and will thus interfere with maximum utilization of motor vehicles for the war effort and to residential civilian economy."

The recommended load limits are as follows:

- (1) permissible width, 96 inches.
- (2) permissible height, 12 1/2 feet.
- (3) permissible length of a single vehicle, 35 feet.
- (4) permissible length of a combination, 45 feet.
- (5) permissible weight per inch width of tire, 500 lbs.
- (6) permissible weight on a single axle, 18,000 lbs.
- (7) permissible weight on two axles, 30,000 lbs.
- (8) permissible weight on three axles, 40,000 lbs.
- (9) permissible weight of semi-trailers, 40,000 lbs.
- (10) permissible weight of other combinations, 40,000 lbs.

Wisdom is not necessarily shown by those who make no mistakes.

Infant Sanitarium Opened Monday For Operation

Town Election On Tuesday

Mayor And Clerk Unopposed For Re-election

Four Seek Places To Fill Three Vacancies On The Council

There is to be a municipal election next Tuesday to fill offices of Mayor, Town Clerk and three Councilmen. So quiet has been the pre-election campaign that few are informed of it and even the press almost overlooked it.

Mayor W. W. Elliott seeks re-election without opposition, coming before the electorate for the first time. He was first named as Mayor by the Council to fill the unexpired term of Roy Smith, who resigned the office to become Town Attorney.

Russell Hatchett, Town Treasurer and Clerk is likewise unopposed to succeed himself.

There will be three vacancies on the Council to be filled. W. F. Patton and L. B. Sheley are seeking to succeed themselves, while J. Stanley Smith, Jr. did not seek re-election.

Roy Barnes, former councilman is seeking to regain his lost seat and Herbert Holt, a new comer in the political field is trying for one of the three vacancies.

Legion Women To Collect Scrap Iron

Mrs. J. N. Bailey, president of the American Legion Auxiliary, Unit 113, wishes to announce that through the courtesy and cooperation of Commander Linus Williams the Legion has given permission for the back yard of the Club to be used to receive scrap iron and other metals such as copper and zinc, no paper, rubber or tin cans at present.

The Club is located on 19th street and any one who has scrap iron, copper and zinc is asked to bring it there. When there is sufficient to make a load it will be removed and sold to junk dealers. The proceeds will be equally divided between the trucker and the Airplane Spotters program. This work is being done on the advice of Floyd Dreyer, Civilian Defense Co-ordinator of this district under the chairmanship of Mrs. Herman Whitehurst of the American Legion Auxiliary.

Any one having scrap iron too large or heavy to handle, if you call or send post card to Mr. Melvin Gumbert, Lynnhaven, Juniper 37-3, it will be called for.

New Parking Laws To Become Effective

At its May meeting the Town Council passed certain changes in the parking regulations on Atlantic Avenue and dead-end streets on the water front. Due to some misunderstanding over a hundred parking tags were issued and fines were paid on the same.

At a meeting of the Council on Monday night there was a large crowd of hotel, cottage owners and business people, as well as other Beach residents were present to protest against the new restrictions. In a measure the regulations were modified.

At a meeting of a committee from the Army and the Town, the differences were ironed out and at special meeting of the Council Wednesday night a new ordinance was adopted.

The ordinance provides for no parking on dead-end streets on the water front; parking on East side of Atlantic Avenue between half hour after sun up and half hour before sun down, parking to be parallel with curb; parking prohibited at all times on the North side of 17th street and parking on the South side will have the same regulations as that of Atlantic Avenue.

These changes were put in at the request of the Army to meet the black-out requirements and to have the main street clear in case of a necessity of evacuation.

Operations Will Proceed As In The Past, According To Mrs. Joseph D. Deal, President, Denying Contrary Rumors

Provisions Made For Evacuation In Case Of Emergency

There have been many rumors that the Infant Sanitarium would not open this year, but according to an announcement made by Mrs. Joseph D. Deal, president, the Board has determined to carry on. Accordingly the Sanitarium was opened for its fifty-fourth year on Monday.

It is being operated under the supervision of Miss O. Irene Doll, who has been in charge for over twenty years. She is being assisted this year by her sister, Mrs. Correll, who likewise has been formally associated with the work.

Many improvements have been made during the spring under the supervision of Mrs. Julian Timberlake and the plant is in better condition for operation than it has been in many years. Additional provisions have been made by the Community Fund of Norfolk for assisting in the maintenance of the institution.

All arrangements have been made for emergency safeguards and through the cooperation of the Virginia Beach Police Department, plans for evacuation have been arranged in case of an unexpected air raid.

For admittance applications should be made to Dr. J. S. Sleek of the Norfolk Health Department.

AFTER THE WAR, WHAT?

Everybody is going all-out to win the war and nothing will interfere with that effort—the man on the street, the factory worker, the housewife, the farmer, and the business man are showing grim determination to bring this war to a successful termination. But we shouldn't be human if we didn't sometimes speculate on what will follow.

We face a huge task in winning this war and just as huge a task in winning the peace. To win the peace, we must prepare now—even while we are concentrating on winning the war. No one wants to go back to days of depression, of idle plants, idle men and idle money.

American industry, built and maintained by foresight, isn't ignoring this problem. It is tackling it right now, along with the dozens of other problems created by war production itself. It's laying plans for a speedy change-over to increased civilian manufacturing when this emergency is ended.

Industrialists assure us that wonderful new products are in store for the post-war markets. A glass company is preparing to offer prefabricated homes costing about $3,000 that can be assembled quickly to make cheap housing available; the airplane industry promises new luxury liners, thousands of new air fields for smaller planes, and employment to millions.

Such inventions and changes, forced by the war far sooner than they would have developed naturally, are the mainstay of the widely accepted opinion that a post-war depression of monumental proportions can be averted.

As Walter B. Weisenburger, executive vice-president of the National Association of Manufacturers has said, "the development during the war production period of superior manufacturing methods applicable to peacetime production embodies the promise that we may attain in the post-war period a scale of living higher than ever before."

NEW SLOGAN

"You can't improve on perfection," people used to say.

But now that slogan has been improved on. Progress has hit it, too, and today's byword is, "You can always do better."

At least, according to the news reports, that's what they're saying in war factories all over the country; it's one of the reasons for the rapid rise in output of the weapons we need so badly. Mass production of modern requires a great deal of ingenuity and the development of many new techniques. Their development isn't easy, but, just the same, they are being perfected now, just as they have always been in peacetime.

You remember the early days of radio, when almost every man who liked to tinker with machines built a homemade set. A lot of them were improvised out of odds and ends—stray bits of wire, a few pieces of crystal, a couple of tubes, and a speaker made out of an old strip of metal. By today's standards they weren't the best—but they worked. And a lot of experiments carried on while they were built led to the perfection of the fine receivers we have today.

In this present emergency people are using makeshift equipment once again—this time to turn out weapons. The same ingenuity and imagination that developed automobiles, radios, and all our other world-changing inventions, are being turned now to war work. In our modern war factories production experts and workers are forever tinkering with old tools and making them do new jobs when new tools are not to be had. Makeshift operations of this kind enabled one automobile factory to produce guns almost five months ahead of schedule. Other companies have reported similar speed ups. All along the line war work is going faster because Americans refuse to be stopped. With Yankee ingenuity and determination, they can always do better—and they are doing it now.

America needs today the largest army, strongest navy, and most powerful air force possible to obtain. After the peace these forces of striking power must be maintained to assure permanent peace.

PENALIZING FAIR DEALING.

The general price-freezing order which recently went into effect has not completely solved the price problem by a long shot. Important readjustments must be made if thousands of American businesses are to be saved from economic disaster.

The most difficult problem confronting the retail merchant is that of the so-called "roll-back." Long ago, retailers were asked by the government to hold their prices to the lowest possible level, and the splendid manner in which they did this has been highly praised by such informed officials as OPA Administrator Leon Henderson. Patriotic retailers priced their wares on the basis of original cost instead of replacement cost. As a result, general price freezing has put them in an impossible position. The freezing order made absolutely no allowance for the wide lag which has existed between the wholesale and the retail price indexes. Unless merchants are permitted the "roll-back," they will legally be bound to sell many items without any margin of profit whatsoever—and some items at an absolute loss. It is obvious that they wouldn't last long under those circumstances.

Worst of all, the merchant who cooperated with the government and held his prices to rock-bottom is severely penalized by the freezing order—while the merchant who charged all the market would bear is actually benefited. And it is apparent that the blow is most severe in the case of small stores which have no accumulations of capital to tide them over a period of doing business at a loss.

The OPA has announced that it intends to make a few exceptions as possible to the price-freezing order. But some arrangement whereby merchants can price their goods at a level consistent with current wholesale prices is absolutely necessary. The very existence of retail business is at stake.

EAT THE SAME BREAD

No country on earth has as many automobiles per capita as the United States. In no country is the automobile such a necessity in the daily life of the people. We have used it so universally that steam and electric railroads long ago discontinued the bulk of their interurban service throughout the country, and interurban tracks have been generally abandoned and torn up. Now, when a war necessity, people are required to give up a large event, this basic means of transportation.

When gasoline rationing went into effect, many Congressmen and Senators who regulate the acts of private citizens, signed up for "X" cards giving them unlimited amounts of gas, on the theory that their driving was essential to national defense. Probably nowhere else in the world is a private car for a public official less needed than in Washington, D. C. where taxicabs are as thick as fleas on a dog's back and rates are the lowest. Most Congressmen and Senators live in apartment houses and hotels where it is more advantageous to use a taxicab than a private car.

Writing on this situation, Raymond Clapper says: "The attitude of these Senators and Representatives makes one's blood boil." This gasoline grab is a glaring example of privileged individualism asking the common people to make sacrifices which the officeholders do not wish to share. It's high time that our growing army of public servants, which is acquiring more and more special privileges, was set back on its heels and made to eat the same kind of bread it rations out to the people.

THE GOVERNMENT-AND INFLATION

Inflation is caused when public purchasing power goes up at a time when the supply of goods available for public consumption goes down. That rule is almost universally agreed to by economists. And, judged by it, the Federal government itself is one of the most inflationary influences in the nation. The billions the government spends for non-war purposes helps to create an artificially inflated purchasing power which competes for a restricted and dwindling supply of goods.

That is one of the most compelling reasons for maximum retrenchment in Federal non-war spending. Business and individuals must tighten their belts in order to pay for war and prevent inflation. The government, which is the greatest spender of all, must do likewise. The House recently took a courageous step in the right direction when it drastically pruned six major appropriation bills. That policy must be continued and intensified if disastrous economic consequences are to be avoided.

SOCIALISM: You have two cows and you give one to your neighbor.

COMMUNISM: You have two cows and you give one to the government and the government gives you milk.

FASCISM: You have two cows and give the milk to the government and the government sells part back to you.

NAZI-ISM: The government shoots you and takes both cows.

NEW DEALISM: The government shoots one cow, milks the other and pours the milk down the sewer.

A local man who signed up with the employment agency for work, when he came to the place in the application asking for the nearest relative wrote down, "about two miles."

Nobody ever accomplished anything who was half-hearted, and that's why it was so heartening when this nation threw its full might, without a single reservation, into this war.

SNUFFING THE CANDLE

As Others See It

POLITICS IN RATIONING

(Richmond News-Leader)

The early and wide extension of rationing, along with price control, will place on all State directors of price administration as grave responsibility as the commander of a division of our Army will have in the field. State directors can make rationing and price control effective and respected or they can make it odious and oppressive. If they themselves have proper instructions from Washington and know the art of administration, they will stand or fall primarily by their choice of aides.

The fullest discretion and the largest independence of choice must be given the heads of the State Offices of Price Administration. Any politician who attempts to get a State administrator into his octopus tentacles ought to be exposed to the wrathful obloquy of every right-minded man.

This we say by way of general warning. Virginia has a large measure of protection because the Federal appointee in charge of this work is Dr. J. Fulmer Bright. The day he took this office, he put politics behind him. Solemnly he resolved that he would meet the supreme responsibility of his long public career with an eye single to the service of the nation. He may be assailed by politicians who wish to add to their patronage, but he may be sure that his refusal to play politics in any way and at the behest of any man will have the full and vigorous support of the people for whom he will labor.

ARMY TIRES

(New York Times)

It goes without saying that the Army's motor vehicles must be shod with the best tires that can be made. At the same time, conservation of rubber is good common sense for the Army as well as for civilians. In this connection it is interesting to learn that hereafter all tires used on Army vehicles in the continental United States will have the regular standard tread, formerly used only on administrative vehicles. This move on the part of the Quartermaster Corps is expected to save about 50,000 tons of raw rubber during the years 1942 and 1943. When an Army truck is shipped overseas it will, of course, be equipped with the appropriate type of tread needed for sand, mud or snow depending upon terrain.

Experts on the subject of heavy haulage think that this move might well be supplemented by a study of front-tire sizes, which they believe to be larger on some of the Army's heavier vehicles than they need to be. It does not require an expert to point out that excessive speeds by Army vehicles not engaged in maneuvers should be eliminated in the interest of both rubber and fuel saving. Any dweller near an Army post will agree that Army cars and private cars driven by Army personnel, but not on official missions, often greatly exceed the 40-mile top limit which the President has advocated for civilians. Legislation has been introduced in the Senate calling for a Federal speed limit of 40 miles an hour. Aside from the question whether such regulation should be in the hands of the Federal Government, or left to the States, it is clear that civilian observance of economical speed limits will come with greater unanimity and a better spirit if Army vehicles and Army personnel in their own vehicles set a good example.

A VIRGINIA SOLOMON

(Chicago Sun)

The Governor of Virginia is a sagacious man. Unlike many a public official, he knows better than to attempt the impossible. Women employees in the Old Dominion's State House wanted to go without hose this Summer. Some of the old colonels of the crinoline days, recalling hoop skirts and bustles, objected. So the decision was put up to Governor Colgate W. Darden, Jr.

The wisdom of the Governor's decision evidences anew the reason for Virginia's status as the Mother of Presidents. Said he: "To require stockings, inside hose are still stockings in Virginia" of State employees would be to exert an authority over and above any I have been able to exercise in my own house. It's too much to expect that I can enforce it in the whole State." The Governor is not only a diplomat. He's a philosopher, as well.

FOR REALISTIC TAXATION

(Richmond Times-Dispatch)

Every good citizen will gladly make any sacrifice he feels is necessary to win the war, and the payment of extra heavy taxes is in that category, of course. But it isn't going to make those taxes any easier to bear when so excessive a share of the burden falls on the middle and upper income brackets, and the lower brackets, where the major danger of inflation is to be found, set off with only a fraction of what they ought to be paying.

Lowering the exemptions has helped to right this situation, but billions upon billions of surplus buying power still is jangling in the pockets of the workers and the farmers. Under the schedules just approved by the Ways and Means Committee, a man with a $2,000 income, a wife and two children, will pay no income tax whatever.

Something must be done, therefore, to bring him, and the millions like him, within the provisions of the tax laws. It appears that Congress, in this election year, is thinking more of its political hide than of the country's welfare, and is unwilling to vote the necessary income taxes, or to invoke compulsory bond purchasing, as a means of reducing purchasing power and avoiding ruinous inflation. The only thing left, then, is a sales tax. Such a substitute would be a fairly adequate one, and would siphon off billions of dollars which otherwise would force up the inflationary spiral. Congress should pass a sales tax immediately, if it refuses to be realistic about income taxes and compulsory War Bond buying.

CHINESE STAYING-POWER

(The Portsmouth Star)

Americans should make no mistake about the Chinese. They are in the war to stay. They have not fought the Japanese through all these bitter years, alone and hungry and poorly armed and sustained only by the promises of their foreign friends, to give up now when the war is half won. Recent news from Burma underscores this statement. The Chinese forces guarding the Burma Road let the enemy through until it seemed as if the Japanese had a clear passage to interior China. Then, just as the world was giving up hope for that crucial region, the Chinese quietly closed in behind the triumphant Japs, cut them to pieces and chalked up a big victory.

Some of the credit for this feat comes to America, for they were led by Lieut. Gen. Stilwell, and American volunteer flyers were helping them. But the Chinese soldiers had the spirit and competency for the job, and what they did there was what they and their comrades had done many times in their own country under native leadership.

The Chinese today are a shining example of courage, democracy, patriotism and the will to live, and their fight for survival helps Americans as much as the American effort helps them.

NAVY CONVOY RECORD

(Winchester Evening Star)

No navy in the history of the world ever approached the record of the United States Navy in the successful escorting of vast fleets of troop ships and merchant ships. Prior to the First World War it was the conviction of all leading naval authorities that mass convoys were so vulnerable that no naval force could protect them.

The Germans were sure that the American Navy could never land an effective army in Europe. The British felt that even with their help the mission would be so costly in lost men and ships that the American people would decline to support the plan.

But the American Navy, with some aid in European waters from the British, transported an army of 2,000,000 Americans to Europe without the loss of a troop ship to the enemy. It kept the army supplied with food, equipment and all forms of arms except heavy guns. It got an American railway system, including engines, to Europe. Its achievement orke the heart of the German army and contributed as much as any other performance, before or after America's entrance, to winning the war.

To day the American Navy is doing even better. It has not yet lost a troop ship, though it is transporting men to all parts of the world and at the same time is waging the fiercest naval warfare since the Navy's glorious combat record in the War of 1812.

The task force plan, which calls for Army aid in the air, has helped, and sacrifices have been made on the Atlantic sea frontier, but with the facilities that it has the Navy is again demonstrating that the enemy which underestimates the power of the American Navy is lost.

TRAGEDY TO REMEMBER

(Washington Star)

Two hundred and fifty-one years ago yesterday Jacob Leisler was led out to die at the end of a rope. Doubtless not one citizen of the United States in a thousand is familiar with his name, yet the story of his life certainly should be known and appreciated in a time when a new comprehension of the value of liberty is developing under the impact of prevailing universal war.

He was the "protomartyr of democracy in America" and the original sponsor of the idea of a Federal Union of independent commonwealths.

The son of a Calvinist minister, born at Frankfurt-on-the-Main in Germany, March 31, 1640, Leisler came to New Amsterdam at 20, a penniless young soldier in the service of the Dutch West India Company. On April 11, 1663 he married Elsie Tynens, a niece of Anneke Jans, and through that alliance became connected with the leading Dutch families of the colony. The welcome extended to him, however, was cold. He was regarded by the "aristocratic party" as "uncouth," but speculation prizes in which he was successful soon made the "parvenu" a figure too important to be ignored. Gradually he became a recognized leader of the popular faction.

When the revolution of 1689 drove James II from the English throne and elevated William and Mary to the sovereignty not merely of England, but also of all overseas possessions, the news of the change was concealed by the royal viceroy in New York. The majority of the people expressed satisfaction with the event as soon as they were permitted to hear of it, but a minority of "rich and powerful persons" banded themselves together to maintain the "old order." Turnout ensued until Leisler was persuaded to assume authority as provisional governor. He exercised the functions of his office for 15 months, "the first really republican ruler that ever attained to power in America." With forceful energy he conducted the affairs of the city, defended the province against Indians, and proposed the convening of the first Colonial Congress.

But his tenure inevitably was limited. Properly refused to recognize Major Richard Ingoldesby, who arrived with two regiments of troops but without credentials in January, 1691, he promptly tendered his resignation of his administrative position and they as soon as Governor Henry Sloughter appeared on the scene with a commission from William and Mary in March.

The tragedy then speedily moved to its close. Leisler's traditional "opposition" charged him with treason, he was arrested, tried by a court in which his personal and political enemies were the judges, quickly convicted, and, when Sloughter had been made drunk enough to consent to sign his death warrant, hurried to execution. His son-in-law and secretary, Jacob Milbourne, went to the scaffold with him.

DARDEN MEANS BUSINESS

(Danville Register)

When Governor Colgate W. Darden, Jr., asked the General Assembly to reduce the speed laws to 40 miles an hour, he did so out of a conviction that slower speeds would not only conserve tires and gasoline and other cars, but also human life and property.

The developing shortages has served only to increase the Governor's conviction.

Now that speed limits are applicable, he intends to enforce them in a manner which Virginians have not grown accustomed. He means that State police and local police officers shall see to it the law is obeyed. Some indication of the Governor's attitude was his recent warning to high State officers and employees that they need not expect to have any tickets torn up or escape the full punishment for their violations.

In Richmond this week State police wearing plain clothes and in private automobiles checked up on buses in intercity transit and issued a number of summonses. Yesterday in addressing the Safety Council, Governor Darden served notice he would use plain clothes patrolmen "wherever necessary to control speeding in Virginia."

That should be warning enough

SILENT HOUR

In this drear interim
Of days disconsolate, remote From thee,
I deem it were enough of happiness

To sit once more beside thee, and to see Thy patient fingers press
The clay whereon, still inchoate and dim, Wavers the face of some fair statessman

Or dancer's form, or goddess revellant
From deep antiquity;
To watch throughout the sunned or lamp-lit hour

Thy tireless toil intent—
Speaking no word, while on my heart again
Ful-tided love draws back in every vein

Like a dark sea through caverns reffluent;
But deepens still the fountains of its power.

Thus, thus to wait, with eyes
That love thy drooping hair, thy bended brow,
While the hour becomes an everlasting Now;

Till all the silence opens into flower—
Till some great rose of wonder and surprise
In secret, sudden bloom

PATRIOTISM IN THE SIXTH GRADE

Hempstead, L. I.—A ten-year-old girl called on a program director at the USO club here to say that the girls in her sixth grade class wanted to do something for the service men. The director suggested that they help to keep the club's cookie jar full. Now the kids take over their mothers' kitchens on Saturday to supply the clubhouse with cookies and candy.

Behind the Scenes In American Business

DUDE FARMING—The nation's farm population, though larger than a year ago, may be unequal to task of planting and bringing in the war-time harvest needed to feed America and her Allies. Patriotic city folk are seriously considering turning their vacations into useful contributions to the war drive by pitching in and pitching hay and horse-shoes instead of ordinary peace-time vacationing pursuits. Although farm wages for the nation as a whole were up 30 per cent as of April 1, farm labor shortages exist in greater or less degree throughout the country, are expected to be serious in many regions later in the season. Wage competition provided by well-paying war plants is one big hurdle. Straws in the wind: Idaho business men leave their offices early to bluster their hands in the beet fields. Nebraska farmers petition their Governor to obtain ex-patriate Pacific Coast Japanese farmers to help them. Kansas newspapers carry long lists of farm "help wanted" ads. Chicago public schools are enlisting pupils for summer-vacation "farm for board and keep" work. And California farmers and talks about ending relief payments and "darning" city people to work in the fields.

TRAVEL TALK—Transport Director Joseph B. Eastman last week noted "with gratification" plans of life insurance companies, Chicago's First National Bank and other organizations for mid-week starting of employee vacations. To relieve heavy week-end congestion on the railroads, already straining every facility to haul vital defense materials, he hopes for nation-wide swing to mid-week departures. The Pullman company, especially alert to the approaching vacation problem because the Army is counting so heavily on its sleeping cars for troop transport, is advising the public to "reserve early—cancel promptly." In fact, under a new I. C. C. tariff designed to prevent wastage of wartime transportation facilities, travelers who do not release sleeping or parlor car accommodations in time for resale will no longer be eligible for refunds. If the public cooperates there ought to be space for all who plan vacations this year, for President Roosevelt, recognizing the fine job the railroads are doing, has said in effect that there was no immediate need for rationing rail travel.

BITS O' BUSINESS—Two "Generals" come up with reports that indicate Uncle Sam's production soldiers are consistently going over the top. General Motors reported to the "Production, for Victory" troop of newsmen that a majority of the machines it used to employ making autos and household appliances had moved into war productions at such a rate that it has doubled its total production in the six months since Pearl Harbor. The other General, Electric, celebrated Maritime Day by shipping the first cargo ship turbine from a new inland turbine plant that was completed two months ahead of schedule—and whose early completion means its total production for the year will be one-third greater than originally scheduled. Henri Rush, priority expert of WPB, told a New York commercial and industrial round table that the list of 400 consumer goods recently excluded from use of steel or iron may soon be lengthened to include 1,000.

Will Ignorance Cure Malaria?

Some have their own "cures."

"Cure. It consists in boring a hole into an oak tree, blowing into the hole, and then plugging it with a wooden peg." If this does not seem so good neither does that from the Transvaal, which is now in the midst of its "winter." It seems that to prevent malaria the adherents of the South African "cure" bundle up in heavy overcoats, with woolen gloves and mufflers for good measure. Both "cures" go back to magic—the old bad days when any nonsense passed for medicine if only it was announced solemnly enough. The older and more ignorant the author the better—his "cure" must come from some inner or mystical vision denied to most of us. The amazing thing is that these "cures" ever get into print and that people even more credulous than their inventors still believe such stuff. But these two are recent, in spite of the fact that for many years it has been well known that mosquitoes cause malaria, and quinine will cure it. It is now over forty years since Sir Ronald Ross absolutely demonstrated that only through the bite of an infected mosquito could one get malaria. And quinine was discovered in 1820, since when it has been the world wide remedy for malaria. So true is that that the United States Public Health Service has issued a recommendation as to the dosage of quinine. Neither the South Carolina negro, nor the bearded natives of the Transvaal will ever read it. But their respective Health Departments have been talking them that as a cure of malaria, 20 grains of quinine for 5-7 days is just a little better than boring holes in trees or wearing overcoats in tropical regions.

Books To Own

The author of "Martha" has again demonstrated his outstanding talent for character drawing and narrative in "Between Two Autumns." Here is a novel which—though its theme is hardly new—delineates the domestic distortions of an average family in a manner which is unforgettable. Moreover, the old eternal "triangle" becomes a rectangle in what the late Heywood Brown would have called a "new wrinkle," and the character of "Tink" can only be described as remarkable.

"Tink" Lorme is the intensely blue-eyed, innocent, disarming young man who comes out of a thunder-storm almost like an apparition into the Westchester County (N. Y.) home of Tom Steele, editor, and Letty, his convalescent, high-statured wife. Tink is given an hour's haven following his drenching in the storm; and he stays a year! What happens between those two autumns is a series of events utterly bizarre, frightening, mysterious, and—as we see—inevitable. The plot, each action, each situation follows as though by law from the spirit of trouble that seems to accompany the well-meaning "Tink" regardless of where he goes or what he does. "Tink" looks like a mere youth, despite his 35 years. Retained as a gardener by Steele, he proves a diverting and even necessary companion to Tom's wife, a real menace to her old maid sister, a really first-rate cook, a conversationalist of note (he is a Harvard graduate), and a man of good will. Most of his time is spent in two endeavors: first, in becoming an asset to everyone near him; and second, in achieving perfection in any task he undertakes. His gentle, unassuming personality, his total lack of ordinary ambition, and his absolute devotion to duty and work form a bewildering combination of traits to which he adds a directness which is the more forceful because it is unmixing with personal motives. Yet there is a terrible incompleteness about his personality. Just what it was forms a book-long search for Steele. Meanwhile Letty becomes spiritually dependent upon "Tink" who unwittingly arouses uncontrollable impulses in sister Jenny. Steele—away at work most of the time—too late realizes that there was an emptiness in "Tink" like a vacuum that sucked other people in and destroyed them. The climax to all the clashing emotions comes in a scene of weird intensity. Tragedy is the keynote of the story.

THINGS TO WATCH FOR—Ordinary paperboard, laminated with cellophane, is being tested by du Pont as a substitute for tin plate in cans. With essential oils and glycerin becoming scarce, it is not surprising that a new way to make soap should be discovered—so a patent has been taken out by the J. E. McCormick company on a process for converting whole milk into soap. Something to listen for: A stirring new wartime march entitled "This is God's War," published by Associated Music Publishers. The music is by Baldwin Bergerson and lyrics by David Gregory. Inspired by Carl Boyer's poem, "Joe Louis Named The War," first published in Collier's and presented on "I Am An American" Day. New wrinkles in the food field: An item called lima bean loaf, by California Consolidated Canneries; may be sliced, fried in butter, diluted to make soup, baked en casserole or used as stuffing in meats. And vegetable table-flavored ice cream. An Illinois dairy products company that has been testing them reports definitely that "corn" flavor is easily the most popular.

THE HOME FRONT

Uncle Sam paid a bill of 31 million dollars in the first World War to crush German imperialism and drive Kaiser Wilhelm into exile. Thirteen and a half billions of that, it has been estimated, was wasted on swollen prices—never went to hold a line or storm a trench. That was inflation old style.

Already in this war advancing prices have padded the bill by 35 billions, or more than the total cost of the last one. And at the rate they were mounting they would have increased the cost by two-and-a-half billions every month that went by, two-and-a-half billions which would have bought 25,000 pursuit planes, 35,000 medium tanks or 1,500,000 heavy machine guns. And the cost of living was mounting steadily, too.

Such a situation obviously called for action. Last week's order from the Office of Price Administration throwing virtually all prices and rents—with specified exceptions—under a ceiling for the duration was that action. The High Cost of Living no longer was a vague threat—it had become grim reality. As Price Administrator Leon Henderson commented:

"This measure is one which the American people know to be necessary. . . . It is, after all, the citizen's charter of security against rising living costs and it will be so recognized. Therefore I know every citizen will look upon this program as his own and will do his part to make it work."

Tougher Lives of All
The General Maximum Price Regulation is the most drastic, the most far-reaching step ever taken to control the American economy. It touches the lives of almost every manufacturer, wholesaler, retailer, consumer, landlord and tenant.

The price order means that a retailer who may have restocked his shelves at high rates must seek relief from the wholesaler and so on down the line to the seller of basic materials. This is what the trade calls "rolling back

Between To Autumns" is a brilliant study of a strange personality. One feels that "Tink" is real, amazing as he is. The author reveals again his flair for bringing a sense of immediacy to the printed page; and the reader feels not only that he is on the premises, but even vitally concerned in the unholy tangle of events and passions that forms the narrative.

Here is first-rate reading for a rainy day.

the squeeze." If the "squeeze" cannot be "rolled back" voluntarily, the OPA stands ready to step in. The Regulation is expected to mobilize our economic resources for victory just as the Selective Service Act mobilized our manpower. The Selective Service Act brought forth relatively few evaders and the price order is counted on to receive similar support. But there are teeth in the law for those who try to dodge it. Penalties for willful violation include fines of not more than $5,000 or one year prison terms or both, civil suits for triple damages and loss of the seller's license for 12 months.

Fuller Support Needed
The rent-fixing order is equally important to the war effort. It affects rents in 301 "defense rental areas" housing 76,000,000 in addition to 21 areas previously designated. It reaches into every state except North Dakota and Idaho and extends into Puerto Rico. It touches enormous cities such as Metropolitan New York with a population of 8,706,000, and such small communities as King George County, Va. with 5,431 souls.

The order does not have the immediate effect of law; it should be noted, as does the price-control regulation, OPA is giving State and local officials 60 days to "cut back" rents to the level obtaining on dates which vary according to locality. After that, if the necessary adjustments have not been made, OPA will take things in its own hands.

"A program as vast as this," said Mr. Henderson, "will need the fullest public support and we know that we shall have the backing of all landlords who have not attempted to take advantage of abnormal conditions."

President Calls It "Privilege"
In the final analysis, the President pointed out in his last frsided talk we should consider it a "privilege"—not a "sacrifice"—to shoulder this small burden for victory. Business men will recognize the importance of these two weapons for the war on the Home Front. They know that sons and nephews in the war theatres must be furnished the tools of destruction at the lowest possible cost. They know the dangers of runaway prices from the memories of post-war America and post-war Europe. They know that civilian security and morale must be kept intact. They know the futility of winning the war across the seas and losing it across the counters. They know we must have total mobilization for total war.

McNutt Hits Nail On Head
Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt, chairman of the new Manpower Commission, hit his mobilization nail on the head in a recent speech at a "Buy a Bomber Show" sponsored by the St. Paul Trades and Labor Assembly.

"We must translate our war production goal into terms of labor needs," he said. "Despite all the shifting requirements of a mobile world-wide war, we must try to map out in our Manpower general staff exactly when and where workers will be needed."

"Aim Cosmetics At Enemy"

The War Production Board has urged American women to aim their lipstick containers at the enemy. That is, they are asked to save the bottles, jars and tubes in which they buy beauty aids and fill them over and over again. No shortage of glamour is anticipated—but metal containers are something else. Here's why this is important: It is estimated that three to five million pounds of plastics, 250,000 tons of steel, 2,250 tons of copper and, 550 tons of zinc were used in the cosmetic industry last year.

Hotel Association Holds Convention

Although normal travel is curtailed at this time, due to the Nation's need of transportation to step-up war production, Roland Eaton, managing director of the Cavalier hotel in this resort, advises that hotelmen will observe the National Hotel Week this year as usual. This is the fourth year of this enterprise, which has done so much to establish a closer understanding between the hotels and the traveling public.

The observance this year began June 1st and will continue through June 7th. Mr. Eaton is pointed to the statement issued by President Roosevelt on March 10th as indicating the continued need for vacations and recreations in this country, consistent of course with restrictions relating to the war effort.

In his recent statement, President Roosevelt indicated that while it is obvious that the war effort is the primary task of everyone in the Nation, it has been proven beyond doubt that human beings cannot sustain prolonged work indefinitely, without maintaining a proper balance between work and recreation.

"Within reasonable limits," Mr. Roosevelt said, "I believe that the war effort will not be hampered, but on the contrary will be actually improved by sensible participation in healthy recreational pursuits."

The theme of this year's National Hotel Week, Mr. Eaton says, will be "On The Home Front, Hotels Also Serve." The hotels provide comfortable quarters, relaxation, and recreation for the great civilian army of travelers on furloughs, who are devoting their talents and energies to promote increased production.

All local member hotels of the American Hotel Association are participating in the celebration of National Hotel Week.

"In spite of extraordinary conditions, and the willing effort of everyone to sacrifice in order to advance the war effort," said Mr. Eaton, "we hotel men still strive to maintain a tradition that is very close to our hearts, and that tradition that an hotel always in the highest sense must be conducted on the principle that essentially it is 'A Home Away from Home.'"

Road Construction To Be Held Up

General James A. Anderson, State Highway Commissioner reported that added to his problems due to the "stop construction" order due to the shortage of bituminous materials for maintenance work, has been the damage from floods over a large section of the State. Official estimate is that recent rains have caused $30,000,000 damage in the Staunton District alone. Other counties which have been the hardest hit are Rockingham, Bath, Alleghany and Rockbridge.

Several small bridges have been washed out and light traffic is blocked on the important Lee Highway, U. S. 11, in Shenandoah County. In other sections one way traffic and detours have been necessary in other sections. General Anderson also reported that observers all over the State report a heavy falling off of passenger car traffic. Pleasure traffic on rural roads is almost nonexistent. "The blow to highway revenues will certainly be severe," General Anderson said, "while the blow to filling station operators and dealers in automobile accessories will be even worse."

N. Clarence Smith, Chairman of the Conservation Commission, has forwarded a letter to the Secretary of the Interior, Harold I. Jones, who is also Federal Petroleum Coordinator, advocating a "vacation ration" of gasoline. No reply has as yet been received but Mr. Smith is hopeful of results for the following reasons:

"According to the best information available, there will be such an overwhelming demand for the use of trains, buses, planes and such steamship lines which are still operating that these facilities will be taxed beyond their ability."

"In order to relieve the pressure on these modes of transportation during the peak months it would be tremendously helpful if, when the new system of gasoline rationing is put into effect on July 1, each motorist, could be allowed what might be called a 'Vacation Ration.' By that we mean that over and above the normal ration, each motorist will be given, let us say for example, twenty gallons of gasoline so he and his family may go to a nearby resort or place for a vacation."

"This proposal is not being made with the view of re-opening promiscuous interstate motor travel. We are simply advocating that motorists, once a year, be given enough gasoline for one family vacation trip near home."

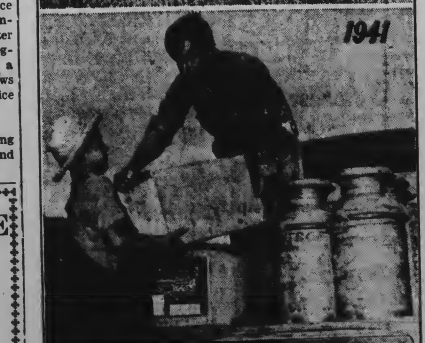

In presenting the plan, Mr. Smith urged that no consideration be given to it if it would in any way retard the war effort.

The weekly Sunday School of the Galilee Church has been closed for the summer months.

The Galilee Church is preparing to open a recreation center at the Parish House during the summer. This room is not to be opened in opposition to the USO Club, but merely to relieve in some part the congestion of that Club. The purpose will be to supply reading, writing and lounge facilities.

Not Wheat but Milk and Eggs

In 1918 wheat headed the list of farm products needed for national defense purposes. In today's emergency, however, the emphasis is on foods such as milk and eggs. There is plenty of wheat on hand—in fact, nearly a two-year supply is stored in the nation's Ever-Normal Granary. The U. S. Department of Agriculture urges that farmers, in planning for next year, hold down production of surplus crops such as wheat and at the same time expand production of defense foods needed today.

Official U. S. Treasury VIRGINIA WAR BOND QUOTAS FOR JUNE

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 1.—Henry Morgenthau, Jr., Secretary of the Treasury, today made known June War Bond quotas for the 3,070 counties in the nation to all State and County War Savings Staffs.

The June quota for the State of Virginia is $12,006,700. The county quotas, based upon a substantial increase over May quotas, are expected to reach ten per cent of income when the nation goes on a billion-dollar-a-month War Bond basis in July to help meet the war cost. "Everybody, every pay day, ten per cent," is the battle cry throughout the country. You can buy War Bonds at your Bank, Building & Loan Association, Post Office and at many department stores.

Quotas by counties are:

Ships of the Destroyer type comprise the bulk of our fighting ships in the American Navy. Their average displacement is about 1800 tons, and they are fast, powerful, and hard hitting. They have been particularly effective in convoy duty and gave a good account of themselves in the Coral Sea engagement. They cost approximately $3,600,000 each.

What You Buy With WAR BONDS
The power of the greatest Navy in the world, our own two-ocean fleet, rests in large measure on its backbone—the Battleships of the Line. They displace approximately 35,000 tons and cost up to $70,000,000. We have something like a score of these huge ships in the Atlantic and Pacific.

Colonel Battle Back In Army

Marion S. Battle, for the past four years Director of the Division of Motor Vehicles, has received his commission as Lieutenant Colonel, U. S. Army, and his orders to report for duty July 1st at the office of the Provost Marshal General in Washington.

Informed of Colonel Battle's orders, Governor Darden said: "He has rendered fine service as head of the Division of Motor Vehicles. By virtue of his training and service I know he will be of great value in the office of the Provost Marshal. I very much hope it will be possible for him to have Virginia as part of his territory."

Colonel Battle will not have to tender his resignation as Motor Vehicles Director since, under the reorganization authorized by the General Assembly, the present set-up of the Division will be liquidated as of July 1st and the duties of the Division placed in two divisions with two separate heads, one for licensing and one for State Police. Neither of these heads have as yet been appointed by Governor Darden.

Colonel Battle was born in Rocky Mount, N. C. in 1880 but, with his family, moved at an early age to Southwest Virginia. While a student at St. Albans School in Radford he enlisted in the U. S. Army for service in the Spanish American War. He first saw service in the Philippine Insurrection, during which time he was commissioned a Second Lieutenant. During World War I he was assigned to the Forty-second or Rainbow Division and with them served in France. Later he was to serve at the First Corps Headquarters as heavy artillery officer; Chief of the Information Section of the First Army in Cologne, and Provost Marshal of Paris in 1919. He has been decorated by four governments, the United States Distinguished Service Medal, the French Legion of Honor, the War Cross of Czechoslovakia, and the Order of Danilo of Montenegro.

Colonel Battle voluntarily retired from active service in 1922 as a full colonel and settled down in Roanoke where he took on active part in the civic and political life of the community. He was elected to the General Assembly but resigned to become postmaster at Roanoke in 1937. This he resigned when, in March 1938, he was appointed by former Governor Price as Director of the Division of Motor Vehicles. Interviewed this week Colonel Battle said, "The past four years have been interesting and pleasant, but I am glad to go back into the Army and have another opportunity to be of service."

Housewife's Important Job to Keep Home Front Well Fed for Victory

Thanks and planes and guns make for eventual victory. Vitamins and minerals and proper nutrition make a strong people capable of managing this eventual victory.

So, the soldier in the field and the housewife in the kitchen each has a job to do, he to hold the defense line, she to maintain the nutritive value of the food America eats for victory in the new war economy.

Today's need for careful budgeting, which entails buying in greater quantities than usual, brings new problems of storing and preserving foods so as to retain the maximum of their original mineral and vitamin content which has a tendency to do a disappearing act if given half a chance.

The wise housewife is aware of this tendency and knows that her refrigerator is the most potent weapon in fighting it.

Canned foods, dried foods and quick frozen foods all require different storage methods, according to Mabel Steger, Home Economics Consultant for the Philco Corporation. Many people, Miss Steger says, wonder if it is safe to store opened tinned foods in the refrigerator. The Bureau of Home Economics of the United States Department of Agriculture says: "Yes. Food spoils no faster or no slower in the open can than in other open containers. It is just as safe to leave the food in the can as to transfer it to a dish. The same care should be taken to keep it cool and covered."

The best method of refrigerator storage for open canned foods is to follow the same rules laid down for fresh foods. Store evaporated or condensed milk in the coldest part of the refrigerator. Store left-over canned meat or fish in the meat keeper or the coldest part of the refrigerator. Cover to avoid evaporation and to avoid odor.

Store left-over canned vegetables in the moist cold compartment or store in the dry cold compartment of the refrigerator in a tightly covered jar or in the can with an oil silk cover or wax paper held in place with a rubber band. Evaporation of the liquid causes loss of color and probably loss of vitamins in the vegetables.

Dehydrated and dried fruits and vegetables should be stored in a cool, dry place. In hot, humid weather, store them in the dry cold compartment of your refrigerator. This avoids mold and bugs.

Quick-frozen foods should be kept in the freezing compartment of your automatic refrigerator. Quick frozen foods should not be defrosted before cooking because defrosting causes loss of vitamins and minerals.

If quick frozen foods are to be eaten raw, remove the package from the freezing compartment and leave it in the regular dry cold compartment for a few hours before serving. Quick frozen meats, poultry and fish may be defrosted by removing them from the freezing compartment before using and replacing them in the regular dry cold compartment. It is not necessary to defrost these foods before cooking but if they are not defrosted, remember to allow extra time for broiling, pan-broiling and roasting.

These simple storage rules are more important that they first appear because in the ultimate, it's the properly fed people who win the wars... the underfed only participate in the battles.

Notice of target practice with automatic weapons and small arms at Camp Pendleton, June 1 to 15, including Sunday, between the hours of 7:30 a. m. and 4:30 p. m., has been issued by the commanding officer. All persons concerned are warned to take appropriate action.

Sale Of War Bonds Popular At Pendleton

More than $12,000.00 worth of War Savings Bonds already have been reserved by the officers and men of Camp Pendleton in the first week of the Class A Pay Reservation campaign. This plan is to deduct a certain amount from each man's pay every month of the year. The amount stipulated by the individual. Men may reserve Bonds for as little as $1.25 a month, though the most popular figure has been $6.25 a month, which buys a $25.00 Bond every three months.

$21 Private Shells Out Cash For $1,000 Bond

A $21-a-month private named Joseph E. Vas was walked into the Camp Post Office one day last week and plunked $750 in cash down at the stamp window. "Gimme a $1,000 War Savings Bond," he said. The astounded Post Office clerk, Mr. P. A. Croonenbergher, took one look at Pvt. Vas's serious face and another look at the $750. Then he phoned the Virginia Beach post office to send up the bond. Bonds aren't carried by the Camp Post Office. Pvt. Vas, a three-month "veteran" in Capt. MacMillan's battery, signed for and paid for the Bond triumphantly, without blinking an eye. When Major Thomas H. Mundy, Camp Bond Officer, heard of Pvt. Vas's purchase, he wouldn't believe it until confirmed by the Post Office. Then Pvt. Vas explained how he had been able to get so much money.

Back in January, Pvt. Vas's brother, Michael, a Coast Guardsman, was killed on a torpedoed ship. Michael's insurance went to Pvt. Vas, because the men's parents are dead. Pvt. Vas received the insurance money last week and immediately bought the Bond. "The country," said Pvt. Vas, "can find a lot more use for the dough right now than I can. And ten years from now that thousy and bucks will come in plenty handy."

War Dept. Praises The G. I. Gazette

Except for an unsolicited letter received last Wednesday by Camp Pendleton's News Bureau from the War Department Bureau of Public Relations in Washington, D. C.:

"The G. I. GAZETTE is one of the brightest and best camp papers we have seen. We are glad to have it on the mailing list. . . . Best wishes for your continued success. . . ."

The letter was signed by Mr. John B. Cowan, civilian expert in the Publication and Special Assignment Branch of the Bureau of Public Relations, who said he was sending the GAZETTE's "Mammy's Day" pictures (May 9 issue) to 6,000 newspapers all over the United States.

Path Is Rushed For Dim-out Use

A path and foot-bridge were rushed to completion this week beside the road from Camp Pendleton to Virginia Beach so soldiers may walk to and from town without risking their lives in the path of dimmed-out vehicles.

Details of soldiers have been digging and grading the path for two weeks, while civilian workers have been constructing the foot-bridge over the stream near the beach, right beside the car-bridge. In charge of the military details have been Capt. Henry L. Miller and Lieut. Jean M. Barker, both of the Service Unit. Construction of the foot-bridge was planned by Capt. M. B. Walker, Camp Utilities officer.

The path is being surfaced with sand and clay.

Most people have no idea of how much work they can do; they never really tried to see.

DIAGNOSING TUBERCULOSIS

"For more than fifty years it has been known that all tuberculosis is caused by an organism called the tubercle bacillus. This germ is extremely hardy; it can survive drying and freezing, and it can spread without direct person-to-person contact. These germs either must be breathed in to the body by a person who is in direct contact with the droplets from the uncovered cough or sneeze of a tubercular patient, or who breathes dust mixed with tubercular germs from dried sputum or other bodily discharges. Germs may be carried into the mouth on dishes or fingers which have been soiled with the discharge of a tubercular patient, or in food which has been thus infected. Milk from tubercular cows also may be a source of infection, the last named danger being avoided by having the milk properly pasteurized or boiled before giving it to babies and young children," states Dr. L. C. Egin, State Health Commissioner.

"When tubercular organisms gain entrance to the body, it does its best to destroy them before they can find a lodging place. If the body is unable to do this the germs lodge usually in the lungs, but sometimes in the bones, the glands of the neck, the throat, the intestines, the kidneys and other organs. It the tubercle bacilli enter a body which has lost its fighting power through lack of proper food and rest, or for any other reasons, or if the germs multiply too rapidly, it is then that the body begins to show signs of the disease.

"Danger signals include: 1, spitting of blood-streaked sputum; 2, cough or hoarseness that lasts longer than an ordinary cold; 3, a daily afternoon rise in temperature; 4, steady, unexplained loss of weight; 5, a feeling of tiredness for which there seems to be no particular reason; 6, poor appetite; 7, chronic indigestion; 8, persistent or recurring pain in the chest. Any one of the symptoms may mean that a person has tuberculosis. However, the physician alone can decide.

"If, after taking a health history and making a thorough physical examination, certain signs seem to point to tuberculosis, the doctor will have an x-ray picture taken. This procedure is of great importance in detecting tuberculosis early, and may show disease before any symptoms whatever are noticed.

"The first infection by tubercular germs is most likely to occur in childhood or adolescence, though it may occur at any age. If infection is slight and the child in good health, the body may win an easy victory. However, it is important to discover whether a child has had a first infection, especially when it has been exposed to tuberculosis. This can be detected by a harmless skin test called the tuberculin test.

PROPS IN PORTRAITURE

Simple props, such as the tennis racket and visor worn by this attractive model, will help to make your informal portraits successful.

Informal portraits sometimes fall because of two reasons: first, the subject may be one of those people who just can't appear at ease before a camera; second, the subject has nothing to do and thus appears artificially posed. There's so much we can do about the first situation, but it's easy to remedy that second condition. Just introduce a few "props."

What are props? Well, in the photographic sense the term covers practically any existing or fancied object. But generally speaking, props for informal portraits include only ordinary items found in almost any home. For instance, in the week's illustration the tennis equipment could well come under the heading of props. Perhaps the subject is a tennis player—it doesn't make much difference—because she looks as if she had been playing. And the props in the picture are almost totally responsible for that effect. Take them away, and you'd have nothing but an ordinary picture of a rather attractive girl. Clothes, although most of us don't think of them that way, come under the heading of props, just as do books and chairs. Different clothes will create different moods in informal portraiture. For instance, consider how changed our tennis player might appear in an evening gown. Take advantage of that fact the next time you picture people. Show them in several different types of clothes.

You'll find it pays to assemble a grab bag of different types of props for use in informal portraiture. Include sports' equipment, books, drapes, different types of hats, etc. It will help to make your informal portraiture more interesting to your subject, as well as to you.

Will There Be Chaos?

by RUTH TAYLOR

Even though we are in the midst of war, even though we are fighting with every ounce of energy and every atom of strength for its successful prosecution, we are all thinking ahead. There is a dread of the aftermath of war. There are those who still paint rosy pictures of the time when the trumpets shall cease and the lion and the lamb lie down together; there are those who talk of revenge and the utter annihilation of the enemy for all time; there are those who anticipate a socialistic regimented life with enthusiasm and those who look forward to it with horror; there are those, too, who say that no matter who wins, the result will be chaos.

Will there be chaos? Not unless we, as a people, and as individuals, are chaotic.

If we as individuals shirk our responsibilities, lay down on our jobs, neglect our part in community life, join in groups to demand special privileges for ourselves, start or fan bonfires of hate to work for our own interests under the camouflage of smoke screens, ignore our duty as voters or back our candidates because of what they might do for us rather than for the nation as a whole—in short, if we work for ourselves alone, the end will be chaos, for the power will pass into the hands of those who are most fanatic and selfish in their zeal.

Now is the time to prove the worth of the democratic way of life. Now is the time to fight for the present and prepare for the future—not in exhaustive blueprints of what we will get, but in practical every-day demonstration that we can put aside self and work together.

This nation after the war, this world after the war, will be just what we make it. We will get out of it just what we put into it. Each day we are learning how great is the stature of the average man, and how much he will sacrifice for the right. It is because of this high standard among us that the examples of selfishness stand out so glaringly. As we, the people, have answered the challenge of war, so must we be prepared to answer the challenge of peace.

If we, the ordinary men and women of this country, do our job and take our share of the burden of citizenship, there will be no chaos when the war is won—for we will be the majority, the rulers of the democracy. What the future holds is up to us!

NAZI SCAPEGOATS

As early as 1935 posters appeared in Germany stating, "Recognize them, the Roman Catholic vampires! German Youth, stay away from such like. Unite against the international bandits!" Earlier, on February 9, 1934, the Roman Catholic Church condemned The Myth of the Twentieth Century, a book by the Nazi philosopher Alfred Rosenberg, in the following terms, "The book spurns and utterly rejects all the dogmas of the Catholic Church, and indeed, the foundations of the Christian religion itself."

By November 30, 1941 the Catholic Bishops of Germany were compelled to declare war "on the drive toward a national religion," as expressed in a new book called, God and People, in which a Nazi had written, "We Germans have been called by fate to be the first to break with Christianity; it is to be an honor."

Let no one think that this program is not being carried out. The English Catholic Newsletter for November, 1941 tells the story of Father Ignatius Bgiz, the parochial administrator of Nova Oselce, near the Italian frontier, who was ordered to leave the priesthood or be arrested. He appealed to the Gestapo High Command, pleading that he was guiltless of any wrongdoing. The Commander answered, "What? You are guiltless? Don't you know that our Führer wishes to stamp out all Jews and priests?" The priest protested that he had spread no propaganda against the Reich. And again the Gestapo agent answered, "No propaganda? But, Herr priest, your mere existence here is propaganda, and when you enter the church in order to conduct religious services, that is powerful propaganda; and even if you open your mouth to say something, that is also propaganda." The administrator fled that night. One the same night "all the priests of the diocese of Skofia were arrested so that the whole population of that area (about 27,000 people) . . . was left without a single priest."

In 1933, when Hitler achieved power, came the planned persecution of the Jews. They were his scapegoat then. He needed another after he had finished the Jews. He chose the Protestants. Now he has a new scapegoat in the Roman Catholic Church whose annihilation he is determined to accomplish. It is the Nazi hope that the fate of the Christians and Jews will mark the fall of those religious and ethical principles upon which Western civilization has been built, that when this happens resistance to Nazism will have ended, and with it, civilization. That day shall never come. It is Nazism which nears its end. Civilization is just beginning.

NEWS OF THE WEEK IN REVIEW

STABILIZING THE COST OF LIVING

President Roosevelt recently gave the National War Labor Board a new job to stabilize wages and set up a system of final settlement of all jurisdictional disputes between labor unions for the duration of the war. He told Congress that this would be one of the important objects of his seven-point program to keep the cost of living down. The President stated his belief "that stabilizing the cost of living will mean that wages in general can and should be kept in existing scales."

The National War Labor Board has already ordered the General Motors Corporation to pay double time for Sunday working during the negotiations for a new contract between the corporation and the United Automobile Workers of America. This is strictly in keeping with nearly all rulings made by appointed Administration boards, mediators and arbitrators, all of whom have almost invariably decided disputes between management and the two big labor unions in favor of the latter—C. I. O. and A. F. of L.

An editorial in the American Federation of Labor News Service has the audacity to tell Congress to adjourn as soon as possible. The A. F. of L. editorial says: "All our representatives in Congress and one-third of our Senators are up for re-election this Fall . . . They won't do themselves any good by continuing to blabber-mouth as usual. The voters want less talk and more action. So let's send Congress home."

The Washington News flattens out this "blabber-mouth" attack on Congress in this wise:

"But we don't believe most voters want Congress to adjourn at this time, when the duty of every branch of the Government is to be on the job. And surely President Roosevelt doesn't want Congress to quit."

"For he has said that he will ask promptly for legislation that may prove necessary to insure the working of any of the seven vital points in his program to stop the cost-of-living spiral. Organized labor has not yet made it clear that it is wholeheartedly for the point which calls for stabilization of wages. If the AFL should succeed in its campaign to send Congress home, there would be delay for any legislation that the President might want, and delay might let the spiral get beyond all control. As Mr. Roosevelt says, 'time is of the essence.'"

"OIL FOR THE WANT OF STEEL"

Up to the time when submarine operations interfered with coastal transportation from the Gulf of Mexico to Atlantic ports the ocean tankers carried most of the oil. Now oil is rationed, "oil" for the want of steel.

A rail movement of 800,000 barrels daily into Eastern and North-eastern territory is just around the corner. Thus the railroads have met a national emergency in transportation.

Senator Reed of Kansas told the Senate a few days ago that the plan to build a pipe line 1,400 miles long from the oil fields in the Southwest along the Eastern Seaboard has been twice rejected because "it was felt that there was not sufficient steel available for that purpose."

According to Senator Burton the steel for such a pipe line would come in competition with steel that the Government is willing to have used for the construction of additional freight cars.

Senator Burton believes that Petroleum Coordinator Harold Ickes is in favor of a new steel pipe line and the Senator observed that "the issue was determined on whether steel was available for the pipe line, plus the fact that it may take a longer time to build the pipe line than it would take to build the corresponding number of freight cars . . . If so, when can we get the oil through the pipe lines?"

Senate discussion brought up the question: Why is not the 1,400 mile pipe line built? Why deny steel for the pipe line, and furnish steel to the railroads for new tank cars? The Senators acknowledge that the pipe line would furnish all the oil needed, all the time, at cheaper rates than the railroads.

Now if the railroads get the steel for new tank cars—and if the pipe line is not built, the chances are that the railroads of the country will be enriched by continuing hauling oil over the rails.

The puzzle is: Why not use the railroads, pipe lines and highways, and stop rationing, and stop all this outcry about shortages of gasoline?

OVERWORKED BUSINESS BUGABOO

The right of the chain stores to operate the same as any other free enterprise is a basic issue that cannot be hidden even by the shadows of war. The war is being fought to preserve freedom. The right to own and run your own business is part of that freedom. Any challenge to that right is of immediate concern to all of us. The fact that it may be the other fellow's business which is being attacked, excuses no one from the obligation of all citizens to sustain fair play.

As long as the chain store industry as a whole does not destroy individual opportunity and undermine other free enterprise, it has the right to exist, the same as any business. Poorly managed chain or independent stores which lose personal touch with the community, will not and should not survive the ultimate competitive struggle. Efforts to destroy the chains through punitive class taxation or other means, amounts to burning the barn to kill a few rats. The chain store industry at the present time is one of our strongest bulwarks against price inflation. And there is no need to worry about the chains putting the independents out of business, for the simple reason that experience has shown that can't happen. There are more independents today than there ever were before, and their numerical growth is greater than the chains.

It is time to forget the old fallacy that as an industry becomes large, it should automatically be subjected to ever-increasing legislative attempts to cripple or destroy it. We need big industry because we are a big nation. One-hundred-thirty-million people cannot be fed, clothed and housed without it. The only alternative to large free enterprise, as well as small free enterprise, would be government operation of socialized enterprise—an alternative that is as abhorrent to those of us who believe in free enterprise as it would be fatal to the entire American system.

OIL FOR ALL

Don't get excited about rumors of impending oil shortages. The facts are these: This country's oil producing capacity is virtually limitless. Its refining capacity is greater than all the rest of the world combined.

We have, as a result, oil for our Allies and plenty for the civilian population, as well.

Only one thing can cause a shortage of oil products for civilian consumption—the loss or transfer of oil tankers. That may make it necessary to ration oil temporarily in more areas. But, if that happens, remember that lack of oil is not the cause. This country's oil industry is one of the most important and most certain Allies the United Nations have.

WOOL NEEDS WIDER WAREHOUSES

More wool has been arriving at the Boston market than can be cared for in storage places. The Defense Transportation Office has appealed to dealers and shippers for cooperation to prevent crowding Boston warehouses.

HARBINGERS OF GLOOM WERE WRONG

It will be remembered that certain harbingers of gloom forecast a terrible breakdown in rail transportation more than a year ago. Those prognosticators of disaster proved 100 per cent wrong. And the reason they were wrong constitutes an enduring tribute to the industry which hauls some two-thirds of this nation's freight.

Some twenty years ago the railroads started preparing for war. Like the rest of us, they hoped it would never come again—but they knew that it might. They laid down the beginning of a program for rail improvement which has been steadily broadened and speeded.

The efficiency and abundance of railroad transport cannot be judged simply by the amount of rolling stock on hand. The capacity and speed of that rolling stock is the most vital factor. The American railroads have led the world by a wide margin in the utilization of freight cars, and the speed of trains.

A freight car is in the hands of the railroads only about half the time. The rest of the time it is in the hands of shippers and receivers of freight. In the last war, freight cars were used as warehouses for weeks at a time—thousands of them stood idly on sidings, waiting to be unloaded, and completely out of service. That was the principal reason for the so-called "railroad breakdown of 1918." So the railroads joined with the shippers to make sure that would never happen again. Today cars are loaded and unloaded with unprecedented speed, and sent back to work without waste or delay.

These are but a few highlights of the long railroad story. The lines are now prepared to handle nearly 520,000,000,000 ton-miles of freight this year—ten per cent more than they handled last year, when a new record was established. They have ordered 115,000 new freight cars and 974 new locomotives to be delivered by October 1. They have performed a tremendous task with complete efficiency. They will perform the still greater tasks which the future will demand.

Readers Write

Many and varied have been the prophecies that have been dug from the dust and cobwebs where they have remained for hundreds of years, to be read and published in the hopes that the prophets, through some supernatural insight, might have predicted some thing in the long ago that would shed some light on the outcome of this, our most extensive and diabolical war. The oldest of these prophecies is to be found in the Bible, in the book of Jeremiah, Chapter 30.

The Lord was talking to Jeremiah concerning Jerusalem and his people, the Jews. He said, "For I am with thee, saith the Lord, to save thee; though I make thee a full end of all nations whither

I have scattered thee, yet will I not make a full end of thee. but I will correct thee in measure. I will not leave thee altogether unpunished." Jeremiah 30-11.

"Therefore all they that devour thee, shall be devoured; and all thine adversaries, every one of them, shall go into captivity; and they that spoil thee, shall be a spoil, and all that prey upon thee, will I give for a prey."—Jeremiah 30-16.

Hitler defeated himself and the German people by persecuting the Jews for the Lord made this promise to Jeremiah, the prophet. Here we see that God will mete out justice and will punish the Jews for disobedience, but that he will inflict greater punishment upon those who persecute them. He has promised to gather the Jews back into their own land and to destroy their oppressors.

Hitler, in the very beginning of his reign of terror, started trying to destroy the Jews and might have succeeded had I not been for the promise to Jeremiah by the greatest protector, the Lord. Hitler is destined to lose this war, if for no other reason, because of his oppression of the Jewish people.

So far our nation has been a friend to the Jews, and it has never lost a war. We have grown to be the greatest nation in the world because our government operates, with discrimination to-

GOING PLACES to DO things!

And they are in a hurry — so tens of thousands of them are being moved throughout the land, the fastest, safest way — by train. It is a big job moving so many fighting men — but railroad men are working day and night, doing the best possible job — making full use of coaches, Pullmans and locomotives.

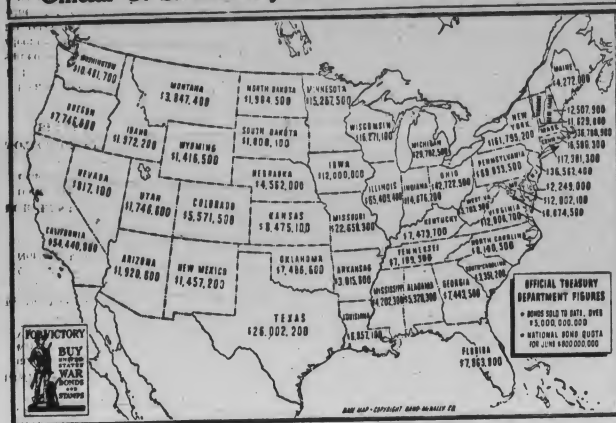

Those two men in the picture with handbags don't carry guns. They are businessmen, and, along with thousands of other civilians, they too, have to travel. Sometimes, if the trains are a bit crowded, they may not be able to get their usual "lowers". But they know that these are not normal times. They know that the Norfolk and Western and the other railroads are doing their very level best to provide the most efficient, comfortable service for both the fighting men and civilians. And the civilian travelers are cooperating. They are making only necessary reservations, and they are not waiting until the last minute to make them. They are getting travel information well in advance. They are buying round trip tickets when practicable. And they are trying to plan their trips to avoid rush periods.

It is this team work, this spirit of give and take, so strikingly demonstrated by the close cooperation between the railroads, military authorities and civilians that makes America invincible . . . that gives her fighting men the confidence and courage — to go places and do things!

Official U. S. Treasury War Bond Quotas for June

The above map of the nation shows the War Bond Quota by states for the month of June totaling $500,000,000. Everybody every day is expected to invest at least ten per cent of his income in War Bonds to aid in financing America's offensive against the Axis powers.

The ultimate quota for the nation will be on a basis of one billion dollars per month effective in July. This sum is necessary to provide for all-out production of planes, guns, ships and munitions adequate to arm our fighting men with the tools necessary to win the war.

SOUP as Mainstay for meal

Dorothy Greig

WHEN days are more-than-busy and yet hot food must be ready right on the spot, why not serve deep brimful bowls of hearty soup? It can be the hot mainstay of the meal.

Use such nourishing soups as condensed chicken gumbo, vegetable, clam chowder, Scotch broth, pepper pot and beef-soups rich of stock and crowded with meat, chicken, vegetables, rice, noodles. Or pin your faith on the thick vegetable purées—tomato, pea, celery and asparagus—to which milk can be added. Soups like these belong in wartime meals. They help maintain vitality and strength. Here, for example, is one delicious and energizing soup:

Highland Vegetable Broth
1 can condensed Scotch broth
1 can condensed vegetable soup
2 cans water (using soup can's "X" as measure)
Combine the soups. Add the water and heat. Serves 2-3.

Blinded, Black-Outs Eat The Right Food

"Ample quantities of vitamin A in the diet are important as a preventative of night blindness," states Mrs. Ethel Austin Martin, Director of Nutrition for the National Dairy Council. Night blindness is the inability to see clearly in a dim light after exposure to a bright light. With the possibility that blackouts may become more common in many important areas, the need for sharp vision may gain much greater significance than in the past. Butterfat is an especially rich source of Vitamin A. Carotene or pro-vitamin A is found naturally in certain yellow and green vegetables including carrots, spinach and other greens. For that reason, airplane pilots and others whose occupations demand keen vision at night eat ample quantities of butter, cheese, milk and ice cream as well as vegetables high in pro-vitamin A.

Vitamin A is present in a substance in the eye known as "visual purple" and it is this substance which gives the eye its ability to adapt itself to changes in the intensity of light. Lack of vitamin A retards the regeneration of "visual purple" and the result may be night blindness. Abundant vitamin A in the diet speeds up the regeneration of "visual purple" and prevents or cures night blindness.

Civilian Defense Active In County

Floyd T. Deary, Coordinator for Princess Anne County, is very busy this week installing the Federal Air Raid Warning sirens which the Board of Supervisors have purchased for the County.

Ervin E. White and Milton J. Thomas of London Bridge, who are members of the Civilian Defense Council, are assisting in the technical part of the installation. These sirens are being placed in the county so as to cover as much territory as possible and give the necessary warning to everyone in the event of an air raid.

At Creeds there is a siren being placed near Halstead's Store and it will be manned by Fred Halstead and Gus Capps. Kermit Land will be on the job with the one at Fungo, which is at his store. The Court House siren is at Kellam's Grist Mill and D. J. Vaughan, Roland West and Sheriff Salmon have volunteered to see that it is sounded at the proper time. The Air Spotting Tower personnel will be responsible for the siren at Blackwater, which is being placed near the Tower. Yoder Dairy is manning the one at Kempville which is at Yoder's Dairy. The Diamond Springs siren will be manned by Dr. H. H. Zimmerman and his Air Raid les, you can look with assurance to Army expansion on a tremendous accelerated scale.

It is reported that men between 35 and 44, which was the second group registered, will, as a general rule, be taken only for behind-the-lines Army service. It is expected that the greater proportion of this group will go to work in war industry. No plans have been made for the 45-65 group of registrants.

Major Todd conducted the class at the Court House in the absence of Miss Mary John, who had to be present at a Red Cross meeting. Mr. Deary attended the meeting. Johnny Vaughan and Roland West report their workers are very enthusiastic.

The Highway Department has placed signs on the various roads leading toward the waterfront and enforcement of the dimout orders has begun. It is hoped that all the citizens of the county will cooperate with the local, State and Civilian Defense authorities in maintaining this dimout.

Beach Election Prove To Be Quiet With No Upsets

Mayor W. W. Elliott and Treasurer Russell Hatchett
Re-elected Without Opposition.

Patton and Shelly Renamed
On Council With Herbert
Holt Selected To Fill Seat Vacated By J. Stanley Smith, Jr.

Roy Barnes Throws Scare
By Short Whirlwind Campaign.

In an election held on Tuesday to fill the office of Mayor, Town Treasurer and three Councilmen of the town of Virginia Beach, there was a gross apathy of the part of the voters. Less than 300 votes were cast against former elections of from 850 to 900 votes.

Mayor W. W. Elliott, who was unopposed to succeed himself, polled 282 votes. The Mayor was first placed in office by the town council in 1940, to fill the vacancy created when former Mayor Roy Smith resigned after having been named Town Attorney.

Russell Hatchett, treasurer and clerk of the township, also unopposed for office at the expiration of his first term, received the largest number of votes with a total of 290.

In the race for the three seats on the Council the vote was somewhat split up with Hubert Holt, Jr., running off with top honors with a vote of 256. Mr.
Holt is a newcomer in the political field, but widely known throughout the Beach.

W. F. Patton came in second with a vote of 208. He has served for several years on the Council. He chairman of the most important budget committee.

L. B. Shelly was elected to succeed himself by a small margin over Roy Barnes, the fourth candidate. Shelly received 174 votes with Barnes receiving 160.

Barnes entered the race in the last minute and failed to have his name on the ballot, and it was necessary to have his name stamped on. Many voters were somewhat confused, and it was necessary to throw many votes as being void.

Beach Girls Win College Diplomas

Madison College, Harrisonburg, Va., graduated two girls from Virginia Beach area Monday, June 8. George T. Oliver

the address at its thirty-third commencement in which 215 received four-year diplomas and 56 were awarded two-year certificates.

Dr. J. N. Thomas, of Union Theological Seminary, Richmond, delivered the baccalaureate sermon in Wilson Auditorium on Sunday morning at 11 o'clock.

The commencement activities began with a reception given the graduates by President and Mrs.
Samuel P. Duke at Hillcrest on Friday evening and "The Medi-

ted in Wilson Auditorium at 8:30

Hospitality House Opens At Galilee

Galilee Episcopal Church will open its Hospitality House for service men tomorrow, using the parish house at Atlantic Avenue and 18th Street. The Rector, the Rev. Stiles Lines, announces that it will be operated during the eral recreation and writing room from 1 to 11 p. m. It is intended neither to supplement nor to restitute for existing work among service men, but to provide a distinct service under church auspices for all men in the services regardless of denominational connection. A simple occasional will be offered, supplementing the swimming and recreational facilities with occasional small parties. The Virginia Beach Department of Recreation will cooperate. The name, "Hospitality House" is also used by the cenoperating of Hospitality House were made by the Army and Navy Commission of Galilee Church,

Mrs. K. C. Robinson, and others.

While operation of Hospital-a more formal opening will be held at a later date. It is hoped that the Rt. Rev. William A.

the school. Every one is welcome.

Commencement oratory is one of the evils that has not been eliminated by the necessities of warfare.

Senator Byrd Seeks Sugar For Canning

Senator Harry F. Byrd has taken up a fight to procure more sugar for the farmer-hood-wife for use in canning of preserves and jellies. The season is on the summer for such activities now and will continue on through and if not performed at proper time crops will be lost.

Virginia has largely a rural population and they depend to a great extent to foods placed on their shelves by their wives in the summer to carry the family through the winter.

The senator is likewise making an effort to move point named to issue rationing cards in order that farmers will not have so far to travel to procure the same.
His first is an appeal to the Price Administrator through a letter emailed herewith:

June 8, 1942.
Honorable Leon Henderson,
The Office of Price Administration,
Washington, D. C.

My Dear Mr. Henderson:

I have no desire to be critical in the most difficult task you have in the rationing of sugar, yet I have received a great many complaints from my constituents in Virginia as to the confusion that exists in the rationing plan as applied to sugar for the canning of fruits and for preserving and making jellies.

Canned fruits and preserves constitute one of the very major items in the diet of most of the farmers of Virginia. The families of the farmers are very much dependent upon the canning and preserving done by the housewives.

The complaints I have received indicate that the allotment of sugar for preserving and for making jellies is totally inadequate, this being only one pound per person for the entire season. The hard-working men on the farms need sweets as a sustaining nourishment. One of the chief objections that has come to me is the confusion that exists, and the fact that after giving many miles on "A" gasoline cards, using gasoline and tires, it takes hours to obtain the sugar rationing cards.
Even then, many are forced to leave without having obtained them.

It would seem to me this work should be decentralized and that in large counties it should be done in localities other than the county seat. I understand you have this in mind, but what I want particularly to impress upon you is the fact that there will be a loss of valuable food if sugar is not made available in sufficient quantities at the time the fruit is ripe and ready for picking.
I know I speak for the farmers' wives in Virginia when I say that they desire to cooperate in all measures essential to our national defense, but it does seem to me that there are other uses of sugar that could be much better reduced or even eliminated during the season when the fruits and vegetables ripen, and thereby give to the housewives the sugar necessary for canning and preserving.

I want to express the hope, therefore, that you will review the sugar rationing program at the earliest possible time to see if some arrangements can be made, first, to simplify and give quicker service to those who apply for special purpose certificates, and second, to increase the amount of sugar for preserving.

Prompt action must be taken,
as the preserving of small fruits has already started, and no time must be lost. What we must do in this emergency is to save and not permit any valuable food to waste.

Cordially yours,
(S) Harry F. Byrd.

Life would be simpler if we did not try to make people think we are what we are not.

Stop * Look At Your Flag June 14th

Mrs. J. N. Bailey, president of the American Legion Auxiliary, Princess Anne Unit, 113, wishes to call to your attention that this year we have more need than ever before in our country's history for the inspiration which the sight of our flag provides.
Knowing that this day, June 14, we may join with our armed forces on sea and in many lands in glancing at our flag.

And remembering that it is the ideals for which it has always stood which makes possible the present supreme effort of all our peoples.

At this strategic time let us remember with Frances Scott Key: "Let this be our motto: 'In God Is Our Trust.'"

We appreciate the cooperation of commercial houses and private homes in displaying the Flag for this occasion.

Beach Resident On Casualty List

Lieut. Milton E. Ricketts Officially Reported To Have Been Killed In Line of Duty.

The next of kin of Lieutenant (JG) Milton Ernest Ricketts has just received official notice from the Naval Department that he had been killed in line of duty on May 8. He was widely known at Virginia Beach having resided here for many years and was most popular among his associates.

Lieutenant Ricketts was a native of Baltimore where he was born in the year of 1913, and received his early education there.
He was a graduate of the U. S.
Naval Academy in the class of 1935. In 1937 he was married to Miss Betty Jane Huffacker, of Virginia Beach.

In addition to his wife, he is survived by one son, Gail Murie, age three; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Merle Ricketts, of Baltimore, a sister, Dorothy Ruth, and a brother, Lawrence Merle Ricketts, Jr.

It is reported that Lieut. Ricketts received a formal military burial at sea.

Mrs. Ricketts and son have been residing with her parents at Virginia Beach since her husband's departure to sea duty.

Gallop Appointed To Naval Academy

News has been received here that Alton Cason Gallop has received an appointment to the U.
S. Naval Academy. After graduating from the Oceana High School, Mr. Gallop attended a naval preparatory school. He will leave July 8th for the Academy, where he will take up his duties to become an officer in the U. S. Navy.

camp within a few weeks when the N. C. C. S. will install a complete miniature radio station.
The camp has been selected along with seven other army camp and naval bases for the installation of this station. Known technically as a "Wire-in" station the broadcasting unit will be set up in the Club to send programs to the camp over leased telephones wires. All kinds of programs will be broadcast from the station. Swing concerts, world news, request song numbers and camp announcements.

As the only Camp Pendleton representative in last Saturday's Memorial Day parade in Norfolk, the Camp Band under the direction of Warrant Officer Ralph C.
Church was hailed by the papers as "the largest and best band in the parade."

This tribute loomed even larger in the eyes of the musicians because their 38-piece outfit marched the entire distance between two big naval battalions—and Norfolk is a naval town.

The NEWS regrets to state that due to conditions beyond our control that for the past several months we have not been able to maintain our regular schedule and form of publication. We, like many other, non-governmental enterprises have been unable to procure the adequate and necessary amount of skilled labor to carry normal operation. Some have been inducted into the service; some have volunteered; some left to seek other employment at a wage impossible for us to meet and stay in business.

The News is making every effort to procure an adequate stabilized organization and to adjust operations to meet the conditions of the times.

It is sincerely hoped that our readers and advertisers will bear with us through this period of readjustment, just as we try to bear with others who are suffering with the same trouble when we are disappointed in non or late deliveries.

Dodson Plans Re-entering Naval Service Immediately.

Gray Given Hobeck's Place
At Sewage Plant.

Police and Firemen Given Raise In Pay.

W. P. Dodson, better known as "Chief Bill," has tendered his resignation as the Chief of the Police and Fire Departments of Virginia Beach.

A special meeting of Town Council held on Wednesday night a resolution accepting his resignation with regrets and of appreciation of inestimable services for nearly four years.

"Chief Bill" stated that he felt the year to return to the sea, and above all, to preform his patriotic duty of giving his services to his country. He therefore has surrendered his position and filed his paper for re-entry in the Navy. It will be recalled Ensign Dodson, as he was designated some twenty-odd years ago during the last World War, safely navigated one of those 110-foot match boxes, so called sub-chasers across the Atlantic Ocean to Gibralter and came back to tell the tale.

Upon the resignation of Mr.
Dodson, and on the recommendation of Mayor W. W. Elliott, the Council appointed Clarence E. Hobeck by unanimous vote to succeed him as the Chief of Police and Fire Departments.

After resigning his position as Superintendent of the Sewage plant, Mr. Hobeck accepted the appointment.

A. L. Barco, Jr., assistant Chief of Police was suggested to replace Chief Dodson, but stated that his present specialized duties were so arduous that they would not permit him to take on more responsibilities and requested that his name not be considered. At the same time he stated he would be glad to carry on under anyone named and cooperate to the fullest extent.

L. B. Gray, Superintendent of the Street and Water Departments, was designated to supervise the operation of the sewage plant after Mr. Hobeck's resignation and given a $25.00 month raise in salary.

The Council also voted a $10 per month raise in salary for all firemen and policemen who have been in the service for a period of three years or more. At the same time a clerk was authorized to assist Assistant Chief of Police Barco in handling the detail work around offices of the station.

STILL POPULAR

"Do we today have as much courage and determination as the men who founded this nation? Are we as ready to preserve it as they were to establish it?" Those are challenging words—words that every one of us needs to take to heart today. They were spoken by Walter D. Fuller, Chairman of the Board of the National Association of Manufacturers.

There are many ways of defending our heritage, however; it is under attack on many fronts—at home as well as on the battlefield.

For one thing, we must preserve the system of laws that has encouraged American inventors to devise weapons that are superior in many respects to those that our enemies have produced. As Mr. Fuller points out, "we see big headlines on carbonyl, synthetic rubber and other products. As a result, some people are misled into believing that the international exchange of scientific knowledge during peacetime was treasonable and that throughout industry patents are somehow interfering with all-out production."

ment has long had the power to have any That is far from true, for "the governments it desires produced for it regardless of any patents on them... The truth is that while American manufacturers are concentrating every ounce of energy on production for victory, they are being attacked by those who have long sought to overhaul the patent system.

"We hear it said that the patent system was established 150 years ago, and consequently it must be out of date today. Well—marriage is older than that, but it is still popular."

HOW HEALTHY ARE YOU?

A periodic health examination may add years to your life. Through the recognition of physical changes at the earliest possible moment the progress of menacing degeneration and infection may be stopped, and a suitable plan of living devised to maintain continuous health. That invaluable advice is given in a recent editorial in Hygeia.

Too many of us never go near a doctor unless we suffer definite illness. We'll go on feeling "poorly" for weeks and months and even years. During those weeks and months and years disease may progress to the point where even modern medical science can't check it.

Medical authorities recommend that complete physical examinations be taken every year, and twice each year after we pass middle age. Those examinations should cover the entire physical system—lungs, heart, blood, the intestinal tract, teeth, feet, etc. In addition to the physical tests, the doctor will inquire into habits of sleep, rest, outdoor exercise, diet, and so forth. When that is done, the doctor will be able to write a health prescription. That prescription may not involve the taking of medicines. It may, instead, deal exclusively with such matters as rest, work, social adjustments and recreation. In any event, it will probably lengthen life—and make it healthier, happier, fuller.

SHAKING PUBLIC MORALE

One cardinal principal of our kind of government is that public officials should treat the people with perfect frankness. American citizens are entitled to all the facts, except those which constitute actual military secrets. Are the American people being accorded frankness? The gasoline and automobile situation raises this question.

The American motorist is completely up in the air as to the future of car transportation. He has heard countless varying reports. He has read conflicting statement after conflicting statement from high Washington officials. He is told on the one hand, that gasoline rationing is necessary because lack of various means of transportation makes it impossible to deliver normal supplies. He then hears that the storage tanks are running over with gasoline even in rationed areas, and that civilian consumption is really being reduced in order to conserve tires and cars. Next he reads an official statement that the government may soon have to requisition his tires and his car. Before the ink is dry on that report, he hears over the radio that such drastic action is not contemplated. Then to top it off, the next news report from Washington says it is hoped that experiments now under way will produce a tire that will keep the cars rolling, etc.

The citizen is lost in a welter of confusion. He doesn't know whether he is going to have gas or even a car next week or next month or next season. He doesn't know whether the synthetic rubber and the rubber-reclaiming programs are going well or badly. And nothing is harder on public morale than this kind of indecision, because it undermines confidence in leadership and governmental management.

The American people don't want to be pampered. They are sending their boys to war and financing its cost to preserve liberty at home. They don't want to be treated like children. They don't want to be kept in the dark concerning matters vital to their welfare. What they do want is for their government to tell them the truth, explain the facts, adopt only policies which are in accord with true conditions, and stick to those policies.

WAR AND AGRICULTURE.

Much is heard of current high prices of agricultural products. What people often overlook is the fact that war has also brought the farmer many a tough problem. The price of everything he must buy is substantially higher now than in pre-war days. His taxes, like everyone else's, are at a record height. Shortages and priorities make it difficult and sometimes impossible for him to obtain new equipment and needed repairs, and building and maintenance materials.

Most serious of all, the agricultural labor situation is actually deperate in many localities. The best men have gone to work in war industry, attracted by big wages. The draft has taken many who would normally work on the farms. Even when labor is available, the price demanded is beyond the average farmer's power to pay.

So all isn't milk and honey down on the farm. The farmer and his obligations, such as marketing cooperatives, have a mighty big and difficult job on their hands.

TAXES FOR VICTORY

Heavy taxes are necessary in time of war. But who should pay them, and how much should they pay? These questions will have an important effect on the war. Taxes are a small price to give for freedom, but they must not be so heavy that they interfere with victory.

The National Association of Manufacturers recently received answers to a tax questionnaire available for taxes, dividends, and repayment of debt will amount to $18 billions in 1942.

The NAM has proposed tax rates that would leave business only enough money to survive and carry on its war job with complete efficiency. According to these tax schedules, the government would receive $12 billions, leaving only $6 billions for paying dividends to 11 million stockholders, meeting debt obligations, expanding plant facilities and providing for a sound financial future.

Tax rates proposed by the House Ways and Means Committee would leave even less money to cover these obligations. For that reason, the House schedules, if enacted into law, might seriously hamper war production by not permitting companies to retain enough money from their earnings to carry on their business.

The problem of meeting obligations incurred before the war is a serious one now, and it will probably become more serious in the future. The NAM studies indicate that many companies will not have sufficient earnings left after payment of taxes to stay in business.

Every person—every company—must pay heavy taxes now. But in formulating a new tax law care must be taken that taxes do not hinder the war effort by draining business of funds it must have to continue its vigorous battle of production.

HITLER'S NIGHTMARE

In the last war the Kaiser was afraid of American manpower. In this war Hitler is even more afraid of American industrial power, according to reports from the American correspondents who were interned in Germany after Pearl Harbor and who were recently exchanged for Axis citizens.

Of all the obstacles in his drive for world conquest, Hitler fears most American war production—and no amount of propaganda can dispel that fear from the minds of the German people. They have been sold on the idea that this is a war on wheels, a battle of machines.

And they know that no nation can match the industrial genius of America. They and Hitler fear our mass production techniques, our engineering skill, our ingenuity and enterprise. They know that these have given this country the highest peacetime living standards in the world.

Today they realize that our gigantic assembly lines have stopped turning out automobiles, radios, and a thousand and one peacetime products. They've learned that those assembly lines are running now with accelerated speed, gaining momentum, concentrating on a single objective—building the tools we need for victory.

The job is far from being completed. There is a lot of hard work ahead; we dare not let up for a moment. But we're off to a good start, and we're going strong. Our enemies are frightened, for today they know that we're beating them in the battle of war production.

Among the wonders of modern life are the plots hatched up in Hollywood.

Almost anybody can tell you what you ought to do under any circumstances.

SUGAR IS SWEET!

Join the "Spoon Stirring" Club

NOW that the Nation's sweet tooth is undergoing a little discipline, America's sugar bowl will be a little smaller. Less sugar will be brought to this country this year... more is needed for our allies... and some is needed for industrial alcohol.

So war, reaching into our kitchens, means less sugar than we have been eating, but it can hardly be regarded as a kitchen catastrophe. It will be easier for you to stay within your sugar quota if you

- (1) Serve frequently fresh, dried and canned fruits, as well as fruit juices, instead of desserts which require more sugar.
- (2) Use less sugar when you make desserts or serve cereals.
- (3) Enroll your family in the "Spoon-Stirring Club" and encourage them to use less sugar in coffee and tea, and to stir it up well.
- (4) Raisins, peaches, apricots, prunes, and other dried fruits are rich in natural sugar. Cooked the modern electric way, they need little or no sugar. Also serve them often with breakfast cereals.
- (5) Save your sugar supply by buying prepared packaged desserts, ice cream, canned fruits and juices, and other ready-to-serve dessert items.
- (6) Substitute corn syrup, honey, maple syrup, molasses, and sweetened condensed milk for sugar when you bake cakes and quick-breads. However, in using these, it will be necessary to change the recipe somewhat since these are liquids and sugar is a dry ingredient. This is very important.

Tested recipes for canning and preserving with sugar substitutes are available—without charge—from our Home Economists.

Cake failures, or the cooking failures of any food which contains sugar, should be prevented. If you cook on a modern automatic Electric Range, you'll find it as easy to measure the cooking heat as accurately as you measure all the other ingredients. Yesterday, today and tomorrow, the Electric way is the modern way to save when you cook.

Satisfaction DELIVERED at the FAUCET..

with a MYERS Water System!

RUNNING WATER is delivered through faucets—in kitchen, bathroom and laundry—at outside hose taps—in yard and outbuildings. And the final test of water system satisfaction is the rate of flow at those faucets. Whether you draw water from one faucet, or from several different locations at the same time—you can always depend on a good full stream from any faucet you open, when you have an adequate, precision-built MYERS Water System.

The famous old MYERS trademark assures you of both RELIABILITY and ADEQUATE CAPACITY. The high quality of MYERS Water Systems has been proved in thousands of homes. MYERS Electric Water Systems are completely automatic—self-starting, self-supplying, self-acting. Other types for operation by gasoline engine, windmill or hand pump. Deep and shallow well models to meet all needs. Interesting booklet and demonstration free.

 Use ground suited to your type of coffee pot—drip-type gives you the most for your money.
 Leave over off of coffee pot when not in use.
 Be sure that the coffee pot is clean — scrubbed, not just rinsed — to put a normal amount of soap in it every week or two and let it percolate for five to ten minutes.
 Let your coffee boil vigorously. Boil and most coffee comes out better.
 Drink coffee as soon as it is made. Some of the flavor is lost when it stands. Measure your coffee accurately. One level tablespoon of measuring cup (4 pins) is usual recommendation. Make the amount you need.
 If you do have leftover coffee, pour it in the freezing tray of your refrigerator and use the coffee cubes in the coffee or for flavoring other beverages.

"THE VOICE of a majority, swaying the course of government does not insure good government except it be the voice of a well-informed and well-intentioned people."

W. P. DODSON

Almost four years ago the Town Council of Virginia Beach named W. P. Dodson as Chief of the Police and Fire Departments. He accepted the position, immediately retired from his private business and went to work on his new duties. In performance of these duties he fulfilled the confidence placed in him by the councilmen who selected him. He was ever alert, energetic and efficient.

During this period as head of the two departments Mr. Dodson has planned, promoted and successfully accomplished many things which have led to more efficiency in the departments. His first step was to reorganize and train the men under him to bring these units to a higher degree of efficiency; a two-way radio system was installed at the police station and all police cars; new and modern fire equipment has been purchased; a new emergency automobile and police cars procured; new parking regulations have been adopted relieving the traffic congestion and hazards; assisting in the supervision of the construction and the equipping of a modern jail and many other things too varied to enumerate.

The most outstanding accomplishments, however, has been his success in lifting several major fires which at times gave promise of wiping out large sections of Virginia Beach. This was done with the odds against him, such as lack of water, pressure and equipment, but he was backed by a true and valiant force in the regular and volunteer fire department which he had trained to a high degree of efficiency.

In the performance of his many duties Mr. Dodson has always been affable and discretionary, both to his men working under him and the general public, thereby winning a friendship among all.

But now "Chief Bill" has seen a greater duty to perform and has resigned his local position. Instead of protecting the people of a great little township he desires to once again take an active part in protecting the greatest country in the world and its people. He has again volunteered his services to the United States Navy. Although a loss to the community, we take pride in the spirit of his continued desire to perform a duty. We know that he will execute this duty in the same manner as he has previously displayed his ability to do.

In bidding "Chief Bill" adios, we wish him the best of luck and the same good fortune as he fared in World War I and soon to return to our midst.

GRAY AGAIN

Sometimes one's judgment goes amiss, we all make mistakes, none of us are invulnerable. Again, sometimes we act on premonitions which later develop into the proper solutions.

A while back the News asserted that the local Registrar should be removed from office. These assertions were based primarily that one who held a position appointed by an elective body should not be allowed to serve as a registrar and in addition thereto, there was believed to have been certain irregularities in the handling of the registration books.

As one of the registered voters, I feel that I have the right to apply to the local registrar to have his name placed on the registration books. I have no objection to his doing so, but I do object to his being permitted to act as a registrar. I believe that the local registrar should be removed from office and that the local registrar should be elected by the voters. I believe that the local registrar should be elected by the voters and that the local registrar should be elected by the voters.

We do not know whether it was wise or not, but I believe that the local registrar should be removed from office and that the local registrar should be elected by the voters. I believe that the local registrar should be elected by the voters and that the local registrar should be elected by the voters.

In the councilmanic election of last week our local registrar openly admitted that he cast a ballot for one single candidate against whom he desired to vote, thereby displaying his lack of knowledge of the election laws. In an effort to correct his error he went further and asserted that he procured three votes to counteract and overcome his mistake. It is wondered if these three votes were put on the registration books on election day.

The News, therefore, again questions the qualifications of the Town registrar.

WHEN WILL THE WAR BE OVER?

Do you remember October, 1918? A World War was on and it was destroying everything that laid in its paths, on land and sea. Within four weeks from that time the Kaiser fled his country and the German army surrendered. That's the way wars end.

Even in those days the Allies were planning on what they would do in 1919-20-21. History repeats. It likely will happen again.

HERE ARE THE ANSWERS

Admiral William D. Leahy has returned from Vichy, France, and for the first time since Laval became a member of the French Cabinet the newsmen of Washington have been given definite information about conditions in Vichy.

Ambassador Leahy is opposed to breaking off diplomatic relations with Vichy. He expresses a "high personal regard" for Marshal Henri Petain, whom he described as "under constant and cruel pressure from the invader." France, he says, is completely submerged under an invasion of barbarians who have seized most of the country's material resources and have destroyed much of the spiritual possessions of the people of France. He also said that "the French people are overwhelmingly pro-American," but he reminds us that they are suffering from a complete military defeat, and are unorganized, inarticulate and without influence on the composition or the policy of the French government.

So, let's be patient with unfortunate France.

TAX DEDUCTIONS FOR SICKNESS

The amount of money which the average American will have left after he pays his taxes will grow steadily smaller. The present Federal tax program is designed to drastically reduce public purchasing power, as well as to produce needed revenue.

As a result, many families will be in a difficult position when faced with some inescapable special expenditure. Sickness is an example of that. The tax drain will take from millions of families excess money that should be used for doctor, dental and hospital bills.

It has been proposed that Congress recognize this fact, and write into the tax laws a provision whereby the individual can deduct money spent for medical care, in making up his income tax statement.

Such a provision would serve two excellent ends. First, it would be a definite contribution to better public health. Second, it would undoubtedly increase government tax revenue. People who are unable to pay medical bills usually have small means, and their tax payments are minor. If they were induced to pay those bills, the money would go to doctors who are mostly in the middle income brackets which bear the heaviest part of present-day taxation.

The suggestion seems completely sound, to say nothing of its humanitarian aspects.

A WAY OUT OF CONFUSION

The world today is full of confusion. The combined misdirected energy and perplexed thinking of millions has led to a state of disorder.

We are all responsible. Each person in his own little sphere of living runs here and there, with no clear plan or guided action. You see it in the government. Politics play too large a part in the passage of important bills rather than the welfare of the majority of the people. Industry is bottlenecked because management and labor are each seeking to show their power over the other instead of cooperating for efficient production. Homes are full of arguing and worry because everyone is trying to push responsibility on the other fellow, instead of planning together to make the home run smoothly and each doing his share. Even in the churches and other high-principled organizations, we see conflict over trifling matters, which the world is too confused to cure to its ills.

There is an answer to all this. It is God who made the world and who is the source of all wisdom and knowledge. He has given us a plan of life, a way out of confusion, and a way to a national clarity that will be a beacon to other nations.

A broad and steep schedule of taxation can discourage spending. A discriminating system of deductions can encourage thrift. The two should go hand-in-hand.—The New York Times.

Behind The Scenes In American Business

"PATCH AND PRAY" is what Bill Batt, chairman of the Requirements committee of WPB, says American industry has to do to keep existing machinery and equipment at work. Batt, one of the most outspoken of all officials in the early days of the war program, emphasizes that war production demands have created a real shortage of materials—not merely a temporary dislocation—and one which will grow more and more serious. "I can see times when even a shipway may stand idle for lack of steel, and an ammunition line may slow down for lack of copper and brass," he said. That means continuing deeper bites into materials and goods that consumers ordinarily would be using, so the "patch and pray" watchword applies not only to industry operators, but also to householders, automobile drivers, people who run lawn mowers or hair dryers or hay balers or laundries or typewriters—in short, people!

BITS O' BUSINESS—The steady drop in the nation's department store sales curve has been bolstered with the June 7 week showing a 7 per cent rise over 1941, and the figures for the four-week period ending then being just even with the comparable time last year. . . . Looks as though price ceilings have sand-bagged living costs at least temporarily. The Bureau of Labor Statistics shows an average price increase of only one-tenth of one per cent for 900 items, between May 2 and May 30. . . . There was a press announcement of a report to be made to Government officials on possibilities of retreating tires with thiolok, a plastic compound developed by Dow Chemical company and worked over and tested by many experts in the auto, rubber and chemical industries. . . . But all the experts still insist no laboratory miracles can change the basically grim rubber situation, and the requirement that we use every precaution and skill to make the rubber we now have go as far as possible! even the most trustingly patriotic!

SHOWMANSHIP—Mindful that you like to see what's being bought with his war bonds and stamps, government departments are staging some eye-filling spectacles of Uncle Sam's mechanical might around the country. Acc number 5 "Army War Show" which just opened in Baltimore and will play 14 major cities for the Army Emergency Relief Fund. It's organized along the lines of an Army task force, with some 1,200 officers and men participating and features a "battle" involving tanks, jeeps and other power equipment. Meanwhile the Treasury department is experimenting with a "Jeep Caravan" booked to visit 17 cities in Ohio this month. In addition to playing their roles in the local celebrations aimed at promoting the sale of war bonds and stamps, the "home state" of Ohio—they being made by Willys-Overland at Toledo—the modern blitz buxies will be open to inspection by the populace.

TIPS ON THE TIMES—Extension of gas rationing nationwide is still a much-mooted topic, but Washington observers say the WPB, without saying so officially, feels that if people would voluntarily cut down car driving by 50 per cent, nationwide gas rationing probably wouldn't be necessary. . . . Bicycles, frozen since early April, will be thawed out for retail sale soon, but only to purchasers proving qualifications on a rationing basis: the OPA has set rigid ceiling on the "War Model" eight-inch bikes, only type now allowed to be manufactured. Some 10,000 have been released lately, but strictly to war plant workers. . . . Farm labor shortage and power equipment pinch may mean a big come-back for professionals—three-quarters in middle west. Illinois once had 18,000 of these, but in recent years individual farm ownership of combines and other machinery has reduced their ranks to about 6,000.

FEMININE TOUCH—Plant managers, always unwilling to make comparisons of efficiency ratios between men and women workers, are beginning to feel more suspicious about R. M. that females are moving into vital war jobs in ever-increasing numbers. Last week officials of the Pullman-Standard Car Man-

Gas Gives Way To Fuel Oil Heat Instead of Rides

Oil Company Officials Predict Great Shortage of Gasoline

Fuel Oil Begins to Move in For Storage to Meet Winter Demands

Tidewater motorists may expect little relief from the prevailing gasoline shortage until sufficient fuel oil to supply heating units is received in this area. This was the consensus of oil company officials. Those expressing themselves requested that they not be quoted due to the rapidly changing picture on the oil front.

Enough gasoline reaches Norfolk to meet all needs in this area, it was pointed out, but since Norfolk is one of the points from which gasoline is reshipped to other eastern localities the amount left here is not sufficient to prevent a shortage.

At present the tank cars are bringing about 700,000 barrels of gasoline a day into the eastern sections with an additional 300,000 to 500,000 barrels arriving by truck lines, pipe lines and barges. Officials said this meant there was a shortage under normal conditions of from 300,000 to 500,000 barrels.

A further restriction on shipments of gasoline into the eastern states is expected as the movement of fuel oil grows in volume. It was learned that some tankers were being used to bring in fuel oil but that the bulk would have to come by rail or other means. This was interpreted by officials as indicating an even greater shortage of gasoline later in the summer.

Service station operators have used up their second allotment of gasoline for June. An example of how the distributors supply the filling stations was given. If a station uses 6,000 gallons a month, the operator would be furnished 2,000 gallons before the 10th, and equal quantity before the 20th and a third supply before the end of the month.

Filling station operators were reported as placed in a dilemma by the move increasing the units on rationing cards from three to six gallons.

U. S. O. Campaign Off With Bang

P. W. Ackiss and Wm. Hudgins, co-chairmen of Princess Anne County industrialist and State Chairman of the 1942 War Fund campaign of United Service organizations, said today they had received word from James A. Farley, former postmaster general, now chairman of the USO National Corporations Committee, stressing the necessity for "complete national teamwork in the impending fund drive for our fighting forces," and "expressing realization of the great value of the work to be done in the USO campaign by the State Committee and all the residents of your State."

After recalling that the War Fund Campaign begins May 11 and continues until July 4, Mr. Ackiss said that Mr. Farley "welcomed this opportunity to serve a cause so closely-linked with the welfare of our armed forces." Mr. Farley reported that "those responsible for the conduct of the war, from President Roosevelt to the men in the ranks, have testified to the necessity of the USO as a vital part of the job of winning the war."

Mr. Ackiss declared "there can be no question that our great State will do more than its full share in aiding USO to reach its goal of $32,000,000, a sum representing an average of 66 cents a month per man to be expended upon bringing to everyone of our measure of friendly hospitality 4,000,000 fighting men some and entertainment." The State chairman expressed pleasure at the tribute paid to the State of Virginia and its people by Mr. Farley.

Mr. Ackiss speaking for himself and co-chairman Hudgins said: "As you know the United Service Organizations united in a drive for funds to be used principally for the entertainment, amusement and comfort of the boys in the service of the armed forces of the United States."

Due to the delay in getting this campaign under way in our county and the fact of national shortage in gasoline and tires, we have decided not to have canvassers to solicit you in person, but trust that you will consider this letter as a personal solicitation.

The quota for Princess Anne has set at $2,000 of this amount approximately $300 has already been raised by letter solicitations. The contributors to date have been: Bayne-Roland Corporation $25; W. F. Crockett, $5; The Pinewood Hotel, $10; Tidewater Gas Corporation, $10; Jarvis & Hosker, $1; The Sport Shop, $10; L. B. Skipper, $25; Virginia Beverage Company, Inc., $25; The Sundial, $10; Frances Bingham, $12; D. Y. Malbon, $5; James A. Fox, $25; M. J. Farrar, $5.

Where it appears necessary, local board chairmen have authority to begin registration on Saturday, June 27th, keeping registration places open on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, or any additional days in advance of these dates, as the local board chairman may deem desirable to meet local conditions. However, no registration may be accomplished until new registration cards, which are gray in color, are received by local boards. All necessary forms to accomplish the registration have been mailed out from State Headquarters, and local boards will be in readiness to accomplish the registration as specified. All men liable for registration on this date should ascertain from their local board papers, the location of registration places in their locality, and any special arrangements made by their local board for registration in advance of Tuesday, June 30th. All registration places will be kept open on Tuesday, June 30th, between the hours of 7:00 and 9:00 p. m.

If a man is away from his local board area on the date of registration, he may register at the registration place nearest to him.

New York Pastor Camp Chaplain

Chaplain (Lt. Col.) George J. Zentgraf, veteran of the first World War and for twelve years regimental Chaplain of the 244th C. A. of West 14th St., New York City, was assigned a few weeks ago as Camp Chaplain, supervising all religious activities of that post. For the past nineteen months Chaplain Zentgraf has been the Camp's senior chaplain as well as taking care of his own regiment. Lt. Col. Zentgraf is one of the oldest chaplains in the service and the first chaplain to move from the home station for the emergency training.

To everyone from the post commander to the newest private at camp this popular chaplain, despite his high army rank, is "Father" to one and all. The admiration for him is not confined to Catholics but to all in camp. Daily he receives letters from "his boys" who have been shipped overseas desiring to tell him that they are "carrying on" as he directed them.

The attendance at Father Zentgraf's masses on Sunday are so great that he can no longer use the regular army chapel but must use the post theatre. His office is never closed or vacant and his advice has put straight men of all faiths.

Federal Auto Tax Due Not Later Than June 30

Motorists have until June 30 to purchase the Federal use tax stamp for display on their vehicles. The stamps are on sale at the stamp window in the post office and in the office of the collector of internal revenue, Room 216, Federal building. The cost is $5 and carries the motorist until June 30 of next year.

War Department Warns Full Compliance Needed

Scrap Rubber—Some Say Yes—Some No

One Department Reports Returns Satisfactory—Another Disappointed

Talk of Taking Tires From Non-Essential automobiles

The first six days of the nationwide drive to collect scrap rubber yielded at least 48,365 tons; the Petroleum Industry War Council reported today on the basis of incomplete telegraphic reports.

"The council termed the results 'amazing,' but said that the returns were so incomplete that no estimate could be made of the total collections so far. The campaign will run to June 30.

No returns were received from Illinois, Louisiana, Michigan, Oklahoma and South Carolina. New talk of buying up tires from owners of "non-essential" automobiles was heard in the Capital, while officials sought to step up the nation-wide scrap rubber drive with week-end "treasure hunts."

Wendell Lund, director of WPB's labor production division, told a special House committee studying means of getting workers to war plants: "Tires on non-essential private automobiles must be purchased by the Government and allocated to war workers who are cooperating fully in carrying full loads of workers."

The Petroleum Industry War Council, which has charge of the scrap rubber collection, said it had "set Saturday and Sunday, when most Americans will be at home, for a nation-wide week-end treasure hunt of every attic, cellar, bin, and shed for unused and scrap particles of rubber."

"Rubber brought to light in the treasure hunt may be dropped off at a local service station on the way to church Sunday morning or on the way to work Monday," the council said.

The office of Price Administration announced today that the day that under the permanent gasoline rationing system to be set up in the East on July 15, every automobile will carry a sticker showing the kind of rationing book held by its driver.

Darden Names A. B. C. Chairman

Under the plan of rotating the chairmanship of the State Alcohol Beverage Control Board, Governor Darden designated R. McC. Bullington, of Richmond, as chairman of the board for the year beginning July 1.

Colonel Bullington will succeed Hunter Miller, of Radford, who has headed the three-member board for the past year. The third member is John N. Sebrill, of Norfolk.

The Governor also announced the resignation of Frank C. Stover, of Strasburg, to the State Board of Embalmers and Funeral Directors for a five-year term from June 30.

Asked concerning reports that he had decided on members of the new State Highway Commission, which will be enlarged July 1 from five to nine members, Governor Darden said he was not ready to make any announcement. One report circulating about the capital was that J. B. Wampler, of Big Stone Gap, would be named to the commission from the Bristol construction district.

The chairman of the commission, Brig. Gen. James A. Anderson, whose resignation already has been announced, is selected from the State at large and the other eight members will represent the eight highway districts.

Area of 500 yards From Shore Line From Maine to Florida Likely to Come with New Regulation

Floyd Deary, Civilian Defense Supervisor For Princess Anne Given Orders For Strict Enforcement

Many Violations Have Been Reported and no Further Leniency to Be Shown

At the request of the War Department, local Civilian Defense organizations and the police and fire departments have held several test blackouts which as a whole proved to be satisfactory. Then came the orders for waterfront blackouts, the dimming of automobile lights and a limit on speed. The compliance with these regulations have not been satisfactory. The police and air raid wardens have been lenient so far by giving warnings, but the order has come through to crack down due to many flagrant violations.

The non-compliance has been so great up and down the coast that the War Department is threatening a complete nightly blackout from Maine to Florida according to a letter received by Floyd Deary, Civilian Defense coordinator for Princess Anne County, yesterday. This blackout will apply to an area extending back 500 yards from the water line and further if found necessary.

The War Department is seeking further checks to ascertain whether the people are willing to comply voluntarily to a degree of efficiency or if it will be necessary to invoke the stricter rule. Those communities that comply will not have the complete blackout rule invoked against them.

The State is furnishing 30 additional highway patrolmen to see that all cars are operated under the proper light regulations. A patrol will be stationed on all highways leading into the Beach and all cars will be stopped for light inspection.

Mr. Deary has decreed that automobile headlights which have been painted blue will not pass dimout requirements in the restricted military area of the Virginia Beach section.

Motorists in these areas, which are designated by signs, have been using the blue lights, according to Deary, who said that in the future, only parking lights with no larger than six candlepower will be accepted.

The alternate of these, Deary has proclaimed, will be the standard fog light, mounted on the left side of the vehicle and so focused that the beam will strike the roadway 35 feet ahead of the car in line with the right wheel.

The lens of the fog light must be painted blue with the exception of one or one-half inch wide by one inch long across the center of the lens.

Let's eliminate differences before they start.

"THE VOICE of a majority, swaying the course of government does not insure good government except it be the voice of a well-informed and well-intentioned people."

A REVERSION

The charter of the Town of Virginia Beach provides that a regular meeting of the Town Council shall be held on the first Monday of each month; which shall be open to the public. There are also provisions that special meetings may be called by the Mayor. The latter provision was made in order to take care of any emergency that might arise but the purport of the charter was that, except in cases of emergency, the meetings were to be held at a specified time, open to the public in order that the people may voice their opinion on matters brought up for action.

Some few years back the Council adopted the practice of calling unheralded special meetings at which time much important business of vital interest was transacted without the public having an opportunity to express its opinion. After severe criticism this practice, ceased and matters of major importance and those of general interest were only brought up at regular meetings or at pre-announced special meetings.

However within a week after election the old policy was resumed, a special meeting of the Council was called five o'clock—said meeting to be held at eight o'clock that same evening—the purpose of which was to pass on a question of vital interest to the community; namely, to act on the resignation of the Chief of Police, W. P. Dodson, and to elect his successor.

This on first thought does not seem material but upon reflection it will be recalled that approximately four years ago when the public had notice of a meeting to select a Chief of Police and it was known that the now Ex-Chief Dodson and the present Chief Hobeck were candidates for the position a wide spread interest was shown. So many turned out to express their voice in the matter that one could hardly get within a stone's throw of the Council Chamber. This fact undoubtedly proved that the people are interested.

We do not in any way question the qualifications on a question that has proven to be one of great interest, rather than to have the question settled by the railroad method, which was obviously done for political expediency.

APATHY

The Town of Virginia Beach is a growing town—growing to the extent that it will soon be a city of the second class, which requires a population of five thousand. With this constantly growing population there is a continuous increase in demands for greater improvements and there is an increasing proportion of criticism of the administrative officials. This being a country of free speech and free press criticisms are in order as a matter of personal opinion. But as our form of government is a Republic, that is, it is a representative form, these criticisms should be registered at the ballot box.

If the public is dissatisfied with the management of the affairs of the Town by the administrative authorities it has the privilege of protesting by the above described method, rather than remaining content to air their political views on the street corners.

The Town has recently held a major local election in which a Mayor, Town Treasurer and Clerk, and three members of a six-man Council were elected. In this election less than three hundred votes were cast out of a possible thousand. Not quite three hundred voters showed their interest in the election of representatives to administer the affairs of a town whose population is now nearly five thousand.

We are cheerfully sending our boys out to fight for this privilege and liberty of expression of self government but when we have that liberty and privilege we do not exercise these rights.

What a reflection! What apathy!

THE GOOD NEIGHBOR

America is proud of her "Good Neighbor" policy toward the South and Central America. This is as it should be. No nation can be truly strong whose foreign policy is not based upon the gratitude and respect of its neighbors.

But who are our neighbors? That question was raised a long time ago. In answering it, the great Teacher defined neighborliness in terms of human need. Wherever a nation suffers from tyranny or injustice, wherever there is hunger or insufficiency, there are our neighbors. The torch of the Statue of Liberty has long been the beacon of hope for the oppressed of the earth. Now that beam must shine into every corner of the world.

There is risk in such a foreign policy. Some of our special privileges may have to go. It is the same decision which faced the original thirteen colonies. Each was so fearful of its own rights, that union seemed impossible. But when, in a spirit of true neighborliness, the needs of all the colonies were considered, that crowning glory of governmental documents—The Bill of Rights—was produced.

We need a Bill of Rights for the entire world. It was done once; it can be done again on a world scale. America must supply the leadership; she must take the risk. Then she will have the respect and gratitude of her world-wide neighbors. She will be a maker of honest and lasting peace for the nations.

PAYING FOR VICTORY

No matter how much the war costs, no price is too great to pay for the victory. Patriotic Americans are willing to do whatever must be done to beat the Axis. But what is the best way of raising money for carrying on the fight? That's one of the big questions in Washington now as Congress gets ready to work on a new tax bill.

Although in some quarters there is opposition to a national sales tax, many Congressmen continue to believe that it offers the best way of raising the needed funds and putting a check on inflation at the same time.

Statistics indicate that taxes on corporations are already so high that any further increase might seriously threaten their ability to manufacture war supplies with all possible speed and at the same time make adequate provision for the expanded post-war production that will be needed to provide jobs for the returning soldiers. A recent study of 100 large manufacturing companies shows that under existing rates 54 per cent of their 1941 income was taken in Federal income and excess profits taxes, compared with 34 per cent in 1940. Even without the new high taxes that have been proposed, these companies were able to retain only 2 per cent of their 1941 sales to provide necessary working capital, expand their plants and keep their equipment in repair.

So far as higher income taxes are concerned, they, too, fail to furnish all the money that is needed now. At least 75 per cent of the entire national income goes to people who make less than $5,000 a year. A general sales tax offers an easier way of enabling them to help pay for the war than heavier income taxes would, for in millions of instances income taxes are falling due when taxpayers have not saved enough money to pay them.

Probably no method of taxation is perfect. But, in view of the existing high taxes on individual and corporation incomes, many tax experts maintain that a sales tax offers an easy way for every American to help pay for winning the war.

A LAND OF PLENTY

The vast production machine that has been set up in this country will mean far more than victory over the Axis. It will mean a new and better world after this war is over. Donald M. Nelson, chairman of the War Production Board, expressed this opinion in a recent speech when he said:

"We are fighting for something. For a generation we have been living on the edge of a new world; we are only now beginning to realize it."

"For the first time in the history of the human race there can be enough of everything to go around. Poverty is not inevitable any more. The sum total of the world's greatest possible output of goods, divided by the sum total of the world's inhabitants, no longer means a little less than enough for everybody. It means more than enough. The possibilities in that simple statement are beyond calculation—and what we are fighting for is the right to turn some of those possibilities into realities."

This was only part of the picture which we face today, according to Mr. Nelson. "For if the war is costing us a fearful price, it is also developing for us new techniques and new abilities. It is placing at our disposal an industrial plant—a set of developed resources—that will simply be beyond price. We shall have the most magnificent opportunity any nation ever had. To accept that opportunity we need only have the good pioneer sense not to be frightened by it just because it calls for new mental attitudes and new habits of thought."

The industrial miracles that we have recently seen performed in this country show us that the pioneer spirit of America is still alive, and our manufacturers promise us that after the war is over the huge production facilities and new techniques that have been developed will be turned over to civilian needs so that this may truly be a land of plenty.

There is one thing to say for the economic management of the country today that could not have been said of World War Number One and that is that no one is buying thirty dollar silk shirts and twenty dollar straw hats, and sugar, though rationed, is not selling for thirty cents a pound.

Readers Write

The Editor Virginia Beach News: Many and varied have been the prophesies that have been dug from the dust and cobwebs where they have remained for hundreds of years, to be read and published in the hopes that the propheta, through some supernatural insight, might have predicted something in the long ago that would shed some light on outcome of this, our most extensive and diabolical war. The oldest of these prophesies is to be found in the Bible, in the book of Jeremiah, Chapter 30.

The Lord was talking to Jeremiah concerning Jeremiah and his people, the Jews, he said, "For I am with thee, saith the Lord, to save thee; though I make a full end of all nations whither I have scattered thee, yet will I not make a full end of thee, but I will correct thee in measure, I will not leave thee altogether unpunished." (Jeremiah 30-11).

"Therefore all they that devour thee, shall be devoured; and all thine adversaries, every one of them, shall go into captivity; and they that spoil thee, shall be a spoil, and all that prey upon thee, will I give for a prey." (Jeremiah 30-16).

Hitler defeated himself and the German people by persecuting the Jews for the Lord made this promise to Jeremiah, the prophet. Here we see that God will mete out justice and will punish the Jews for disobedience, but that he will inflict greater punishment upon those who persecuted them. He has promised to gather the Jews back into their own land and to destroy their oppressors.

Hitler, in the very beginning of his reign of terror, started trying to destroy the Jews and might have succeeded had it not been for the promise to Jeremiah by the greatest protector, The Lord. Hitler is destined to lose this war, if for no other reason, because of his oppression of the Jewish people.

So far our nation has been a friend to the Jews, and it has never lost a war. We have spoken to be the greatest nation in the world because our government operates with discrimination toward no certain class, race or religious faith, and on the principles of liberty and justice for all, therefore we shall again be victorious in this war.

BOOKS TO OWN

General Douglas MacArthur. By F. T. Miller.

Here is a book which may have been awaited eagerly, an authentic story, bringing together many scattered bits of anecdote and biographical data from widely scattered sources, of that doughy defender of Bataan who has been described as "one general who will not die in bed if there's half a chance to die elsewhere."

The author has attempted to intertwine General MacArthur's personal life with a chronicle of the high lights of World War II. But its references to the war on other fronts are necessarily brief; the emphasis is on MacArthur as a man and a leader, so that despite the dual purpose of the book, it is essentially a biography.

The MacArthur who emerges from these pages is even more a hero than the defender of the Philippines whom the press has extolled so consistently; for here we see a long life of leadership and hard work, action, resourcefulness and hard work. And if the General's present-day exploits are less surprising to the reader who has followed him through a career which saw him graduated from West Point at the head of his class, win thirteen decorations for gallantry during World War I, and become the youngest Chief of Staff the Army has ever had, they are none the less inspiring. As far as Bataan is concerned, there is little that is new here. For the full story of the historic defense of the peninsula must await the end of the war. What we get is based largely on War Department communiques, special press dispatches, circumstantial evidence, and various personal narratives. But it is important to have it all in one piece for the first time.

As for the story of the MacArthur in the Philippines, commencing in 1900 when the General's father was made Military Governor, the author has made use of War Department records, and the testimony of associates and other friends of the family through several decades. It is an illuminating story. Reading it, one readily understands the strong attachment for the natives which the General has manifested on various occasions, and, indeed, understands the whole Philippine problem better.

There is an interesting chapter on the MacArthur genealogy (the General's mother was a Virginian); there are revealing passages on his fighting days in France; and there is much to show that his vision of the world scene has often been somewhat prophetic. As a fighter for civilization and decency, Douglas MacArthur stands out from these pages as a worthy hope for those who follow his leadership. As a man, we see him as one who has ever enlightened in the service of the highest moral principles. Capacity for careful preparation, hard, steady work, has always been his.

This book is essentially a paenegyric. Its value as literature is not great, nor is it a critical study in the real sense. But it is a welcome and timely compilation of the facts about a great general's career, at a time when such a book will do the most good and attract the greatest number of readers.

Behind The Scenes In American Business

TIP-OFFS ON THE TIMES—Some shoe repair shops now have to turn in old rubber heels in order to get new ones from the factory. Car cards in New York City subways include help wanted ads sponsored by the U. S. Employment Service, offering jobs as farm hands to the city folk. Outdoor "drive-in" movies around Chicago now average 5.2 persons per car, against 3.6 a year ago. A midwest manufacturer is said to have put together a wooden bathtub that looks like porcelain. In cities where weather reports are given regularly on a telephone system, timely tips on what that day's weather means in terms of tire care are given. Samples from Columbus, O.: "Fair and warmer, so go slow; heated tires are apt to blow." The advice about converting oil burners back to use of coal, where possible, is being repeated, but emphatically!

BITS OF BUSINESS—Time-tables show war's backlashes at mass transportation, as well as tutos and bikes. Many mustatory vacation and excursion trains are omitted, expresses converted into locals. American Airlines time-table used to be 11 pages, now it's two. Department store sales nationally are barely holding their own, in dollar volume, compared to same weeks of 1941. One of those price ceiling "squeezes" that bother retailers was relieved when the big three of soap-makers—Colgate-Palmolive-Peet, Procter and Gamble and Lever Brothers—rescinded factory price rises averaging 3-1-2 per cent. Curtiss-Wright announces a $100,000,000 program for enlarging its Buffalo plants, to boost production capacity. A huge cargo planes... plenty of cool clothes for men this summer. Stocks of tropical worsteds and cotton hot weather suits are normal.

LESS CRISS - CROSSING—For some time ODT and WPE have been contemplating ways to cut down on "cross-hauling," which causes unnecessarily long hauls of goods from producer to consumer, especially of foods. Now a group of the largest chain store companies are moving on their own to ban criss-crossing in distribution of fresh fruits and vegetables. Along with extension men, county agents and college experts on feight states, they're working on plans to supply, so far as possible, the retail stores (Continued on Page Six)

As Others See It

THE LONG ARMISTICE
(New York Times)

Two months and a day after the armistice that ended the last great war, the Supreme Council of the Peace Conference met in Paris for its first session. It seems clear enough now, as we look back through the troubled years, that this meeting came too soon. Two months was not enough time to give either the perspective or the cool judgment that was needed to write the terms of an enduring peace. The Treaty of Versailles has been subjected to too much criticism that is unfair or uninformed or both. It was a far better treaty than the intellectual faddism of the Twenties credited it with being. But admittedly it had its faults—particularly in those sections of its dealings with economic questions—and to a very considerable extent these faults now seem in retrospect to be the result of a too-hurried approach to the tremendous problem of making a "permanent" post-war settlement.

In the light of this experience, one proposal made in the Memorial Day address of Undersecretary of State Welles is of great interest and importance. He spoke of the desirability of establishing a new world organization to decide the final terms of peace "after the period of social and economic chaos which will come inevitably upon the termination of the present war and after the completion of the gigantic task of relief, reconstruction and of rehabilitation which will confront the United Nations at the time of the armistice." This suggests a post-war strategy under which no attempt would be made to write a permanent peace settlement until a considerable period of time—perhaps many months, perhaps even several years—had elapsed after the end of actual hostilities. During this period the relations of the erstwhile belligerents would be governed by the terms of a "Long Armistice."

This strategy would have great advantages from both the international and the domestic standpoints. It would enable the ultimate peace-makers to gain a clearer view of the enormous problems in the fields of national ambitions and economic pressures and over-all security before they attempted to draft a blueprint for a new, post-war world. At the same time, it would greatly simplify, and at least partly solve, the problem of a transition from war economy to an economy of peace. The suggestion made by Mr. Welles has in it so many possibilities of good that we may expect to hear much more of it, and, in fact, to see it win its place among the war objectives not only of the United States but of the United Nations.

SIX MONTHS OF WAR
(Radford News)

America has passed its half-year milestone of being an active belligerent. In those six months, the country has passed through many changes, with many more to come. It has begun to feel the effect of war and the realization of what it means to fight for self-preservation will grow in the coming months. The whole pattern of life is being remade and the people who believed that business could go on as usual are diminishing in numbers.

The United States has not taken one foot of enemy territory in the first six months of its participation in the conflict. It has given up land and it has lost men and ships. It has not yet defeated the submarine menace and the shipping problem is not yet solved. But the country has become a land of noise and work, a place where war instruments are being made in ever increasing totals. In the face of petty bickerings in high places, the American people have shown themselves to be greater than internal obstacles, greater than their government. By the end of the year, the picture of the national production of arms, the growing might of the army and navy will be a fearful one for the Axis-nations to behold.

The story of how the nation went to war is an inspiring one, despite the lack of major victories. It has silenced for all time the thesis that a democracy is soft and that its people will not fight. There has been grumbling in the land but no democracy ever went to war without considerable creaking in its joints. That is because our way of life is geared to peace, not war. But the main task to be done, the beating of aggression, has never been forgotten. In the months to come, the men who have thought that the world belonged to them by force of arms will have cause to know that it was remembered well.

This is perhaps no time for taking stock, for declaring that we are well on our way to victory. We have made a beginning. We may have some more defeats but we know that we can do what we have set out to accomplish. The miracles which have already been wrought in the lines of mass production are proof that we have the technique. Given the time, there can be no doubt about the outcome. The will to win has already been demonstrated.

NO RETREAT ON THE HOME FRONT!
(Courier-Record)

The front-porch and corner-store strategists are in their heyday. They know just what is wrong in the conduct of this war. They know just how the terrain that has fallen to the enemy should have been defended. They prate grandiloquently about the lack of foresight, the blindness of the conquered nations. They talk about the war effort, and the bonds they plan to buy next week, and how self-seeking and rapacious are all other groups in this country. BUT—they never seem to see that every hour they waste in idle talk is a step of retreat on the Home Front!

This is a War of Survival. As one of the United Nations we fight on the battle front, in cooperation with other nations fighting for their lives, to preserve our country. As Americans, we fight on the Home Front as well, for we are a nation of homes. To keep inviolate the family and the home, we mobilize ourselves. There must be no retreat on the Home Front!

We do not need to be forced into action. We can and will (Continued On Page Six)

There shall be provided for each such automobile trailer camp, to be conveniently located on the premises, one water closet for each sex, in the ratio of one water closet for every 10 males or fractional part thereof, and one water closet for every 10 females or fractional part thereof, living or sleeping in trailer cars parked on or in such automobile trailer camps. Said water closets shall be distinctly marked "for men" and "for women," respectively.

Section 13. Waste receptacles. There shall be provided in every automobile trailer camp such number of tight receptacles with close fitting metal covers for garbage, refuse, ashes and rubbish as may be deemed necessary by the Health Department and such garbage receptacles shall be at all times maintained in a clean and sanitary condition.

Section 14. Sink. There shall be provided in every automobile trailer camp one or more sink sinks properly connected with a sewer or septic tank, such sinks to be conveniently located at no greater distance than one hundred feet from any trailer car.

Section 15. Waste Water. No waste water or material from sinks, baths, showers, or other plumbing fixtures in trailer cars shall be deposited upon the surface of the ground and all such fixtures when in use must be connected to the public sewer system, or the drainage therein must be deposited in a manner satisfactory to the Health Department.

Section 16. Sanitary Appliances. Any water faucet, toilet, garbage receptacles, or other equipment required by the provisions of this ordinance in automobile trailer camps shall not be constructed to mean faucets, toilets, garbage receptacles or other equipment located or adjacent to such automobile trailer camps which may already be required under provisions of the other laws or ordinances.

Section 17. Removal of Wheels. That any action toward the removal of wheels or similar transporting devices from any trailer car, except for temporary purposes for repair, or towards otherwise permanently attaching said trailer car to the ground, shall subject such trailer car to the requirements of all the ordinances of the County of Princess Anne relating to buildings and structures.

Section 18. Penalty. Any person violating any provision of this ordinance shall upon conviction thereof be punished by a fine of not less than five dollars or more than fifty dollars and each day's continuation of such violation shall constitute a separate offense.

Teste: William F. Hudgins, Clerk By L. S. Belton, D. C.

Notice is hereby given that on the 3rd day of July, 1942, at 8 o'clock p. m., the Board of Supervisors of Princess Anne County, Virginia, will adopt the following Ordinance which was duly proposed at its regular meeting held on Monday, the 22nd day of June, 1942.

AN ORDINANCE RELATING TO THE NATIONAL DEFENSE; AUTHORIZING THE DIRECTOR COORDINATOR TO PROCLAIM RULES AND REGULATIONS PERTAINING TO PLANS FOR PROTECTION FROM AIR RAIDS, PRESCRIBING RULES AND REGULATIONS DURING BLACKOUTS AND DIM OUTS; FOR THE PROTECTION PUBLIC PEACE, HEALTH AND SAFETY WHENEVER A STATE OF WAR EXISTS BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND ANY FOREIGN COUNTRY, DEFINING OFFENSES AND PRESCRIBING PENALTIES.

BE IT ORDAINED BY the Board of Supervisors of Princess Anne County as follows:

Section (1) Whenever an air raid alarm is sounded the driver of every vehicle being operated in the locality affected by the alarm shall:

(a) Immediately drive to the curb or roadside, stop, turn off the engine or motor, set the hand brake, and, if the vehicle is left unattended, lodge the vehicle against the curb or other secure object, lock the ignition and leave the vehicle standing until the "all clear" signal is given, but he shall not lock the doors. However, the driver of an emergency vehicle with readily identified insignia thereon, such as a fire engine, ambulance, and governmental or public utility operated truck or police car, physician's automobile or other vehicle carrying insignia approved by the National Office of Civilian Defense shall not be required to stop when engaged in emergency operations;

(b) If the air raid warning is given between sunset and sunrise, immediately turn off all lights and keep them turned off until the "all clear" signal is given. However, the emergency vehicles as herein defined shall not be required to turn off their lights if they are dimmed, or masked, in a manner that does not conflict with the specifications of the National Office of Civilian Defense. In the case of an announced test blackout such emergency vehicles may proceed with lights without being dimmed, or masked, if the director so directs; and

(c) He shall not park in front of any fire house exit, fire pump, hospital entrance or street intersection, nor block the entrance of any street or alley, nor block any street or highway.

The provisions of this rule shall apply to privately owned vehicles and to busses used for public conveyance alike. Rail busses shall stop immediately, if possible, near a street intersection.

Section (2) Whenever an air raid alarm is given between sunset and sunrise the following regulations shall apply in addition to the other rules and regulations prescribed by this ordinance:

(a) All outside lights, and all lights visible from the outside of any building either through doors, windows, skylights, or otherwise, shall be put out immediately and kept out until the "all clear" signal is given. (b) Lights inside any building may be kept on only where through the use of shades, blinds, curtains, or otherwise no lighting is visible from the outside. This regulation shall apply to all buildings of every kind and description, except as hereinafter provided.

(c) The occupant of any building or portion of a building shall be responsible for the observance of this rule as to the entire building or as to such portion thereof he may occupy. (d) In the case of hotels, office buildings, apartment houses, lodging houses, boarding houses, and other buildings to which the public is permitted or invited, or as to any portion of which there is a common use by the occupants thereof, the owner or lessee shall be responsible for the observance of this regulation.

(e) In the case of vacant buildings or vacant portions of buildings, and in the case of premises on which lights are maintained not connected with or used in connection with any building, the owner or lessee or some other person shall be responsible for the observance of this regulation.

(f) No door, window or other exit shall be opened if the opening of the same allows light to be visible from the outside.

(g) All lights on any sign, billboard, pier or other similar structure shall be immediately put out and kept out until the "all clear" signal is given. The person or persons in immediate charge of the operation of such sign, billboard, pier or similar structure, whether it be the owner, lessee or some other person, shall be responsible for the observance of this rule, and no such lights shall be lighted unless such person or persons in immediate charge have an attendant or mechanical device present or in operation at all times capable immediately of putting out the light or lights in the event of an air raid alarm.

(h) All street, traffic and beacon lights, and all public lights on and in the streets, lanes, alleys, squares, parks, bridges and highways, except those which are dimmed or hooded in a manner approved by the director, shall be put out immediately and kept out until the "all clear" signal is given. (i) All other lights, including warning or danger signals, shall be put out immediately and kept out until the "all clear" signal is given; provided, however, that warning or danger signals may remain lighted in such manner as may be approved by the director. The person or persons in immediate charge of the operation of any such lights, whether it be the owner, lessee or some other person, shall be responsible for the observance of this regulation.

(j) In the case of an announcement-violating any rule or

ed test blackout, warning and danger signals may remain lighted without being dimmed, hooded or otherwise masked if so authorized by the director.

Section (3) During an air raid, test blackout, or practice period, the following regulations shall apply throughout the area affected:

(a) No person shall attempt to cross any street except at an established crosswalk and under the direction of a police officer, auxiliary police or air raid warden.

(b) No domestic animal shall be allowed to run at large upon any street, highway or traveled way. The responsibility of enforcing this regulation is the responsibility of the owner.

(c) Horses shall be fastened securely to a fixed object.

(d) Operators of all vehicles and all other persons shall comply with directions and orders of air raid wardens, auxiliary police and other authorized officers having proper identification insignia.

(e) Pedestrians shall move off to the side of the streets and highways immediately. Passengers may remain on street cars and busses and in private cars at their own risk, or may seek shelter nearby on the same side of the street or highway.

Section (4) Insignia, Warning, False Alarms:

(a) No person shall wear, exhibit, display or use, for any purpose, any arm band, badge, emblem, insignia, uniform or other identification or credential issued, approved or authorized by the director unless he shall be entitled to wear, exhibit, display or use the same under the rules and regulations of the director, nor shall any person falsely impersonate a director or any person to whom the authority of the director may have been delegated by appointment duly made.

(b) No person shall certify or approve another for the use of any insignia, arm band or other identification mark unless the number of hours set out in the OGD pamphlet entitled "Training Courses for Civilian Protection" for such training has been successfully taken.

(c) No person shall utter, make or simulate an air raid alarm, "all clear" signal or any other official signal unless authorized to do so by the director.

(d) It shall be unlawful for any person to give a false, or misleading report concerning civilian defense plans, or an air raid or false alarm, or in any way, by word or act, to cause or attempt to cause panic or confusion.

Section (5) No vehicle, whether emergency or otherwise, shall proceed during a blackout at a speed exceeding existing speed laws or that set by the local director.

Section (6) That the area situated within one mile of and adjacent to the waters of the Atlantic Ocean and Chesapeake Bay shall be known and designated by the Director as "Restricted Military Area" and all enforcement officers, individuals and persons are hereby directed to take immediate steps to eliminate the illumination of signs and shop windows along the waterfront, fronts, all open lighting of piers, beaches, highways and streets along the water fronts, the unrestricted use of undimmed headlights of vehicles along the shoreline and other exposed lighting not essential to the Defense Program and which serve to silhouette passing vessels. Special attention should be given to the lighting of amusement parks within the area and to the shielding of lights which show seaward, especially on high buildings, as beach hotels.

Section (7) The local director-coordinator may promulgate and publish supplementary rules and regulations to facilitate carrying out the provisions of this ordinance, provided they do not conflict with any of these rules and regulations. Any violations of such shall be punishable the same as other rules and regulations of this ordinance.

Section (8) It shall be the duty of the Director-coordinator to cause to be posted at the front door of the County Courthouse and at his office, a copy of this ordinance.

Section (9) Any person, firm or corporation violating any rule or regulation prescribed herein or the rules and regulations proclaimed by the Director-coordinator in connection herewith shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be punished by a fine not exceeding fifty ($50.00) Dollars, or by imprisonment not exceeding thirty (30) days, or by both such fine and imprisonment in the discretion of the Court or jury trying the same.

Section (10) This ordinance shall be in effect only during such time as a state of war exists between the United States and a foreign country.

An emergency existing in this ordinance shall be in force from its passage.

Reading and Writing

Every two years the Dial Press offers an award of $1,000 for a story with the problems that face first novel which deals realistically American youth today.

This year's winner is Gladys Schmitt, for her 700-page novel, "The Gates of Aulis." Miss Schmitt—who in private life, is the wife of a talented composer—lives on Long Island, a subway ride's distance from New York. During the day she worked until recently on the editorial staff of Scholastic Magazine, and during the evenings of the past five years, she has been working on her novel.

"The Gates of Aulis" is the story of a brother and sister, Carl and Ellie Hasselmann, and the town where they live is recognizable as Pittsburgh. Ellie is an artist. Paul is a teacher of sociology. Ellie thinks that the problems of the world must be solved by each of us individually. Paul believes in men working together for a more just and reasonable world.

In spite of their differences, brother and sister have a close understanding of each other. As Ellie says, "Each of us sees in the other one the repressed side of himself in full bloom."

Their home atmosphere is friendly. Paul explains this when he says: "If Judas had run panting into my kitchen, he would have been asked to sit down and would have had a hearing to the end."

Miss Schmitt isn't only interested in what her characters do. All the things they've ever thought, dreamed, events of their childhood and adolescence, are brought in to make up the completed portraits.

Latest reports are that Miss Schmitt has returned to her home town—Pittsburgh—where she is working on a new novel.

With the consent of the Navy Department, the Book-of-the-Month Club has presented 500 gift subscriptions, totalling 11,500 new books a year, for the use of officers and enlisted men of the Navy. It was announced by Harry Scherman, president of the Club.

A similar arrangement for the Army entailing 656 gift subscriptions, with a total of 15,088 new books, has been in effect for the past year.

"We have wanted for some months to make available to the men on our ships the same new books which have been welcomed so warmly by the Army," Mr. Scherman stated. "All the necessary details have now been worked out with the Navy Department, and we are beginning the gift subscriptions immediately with the double selection for June, 'Victory Through Air Power,' by Major Alexander P. de Seversky and Franz Werfel's 'The Song of Bernadette.'"

In the last war, some of you may remember, we did a bit of renaming of certain dishes. Sauerkraut, for instance, suddenly turned into Victory Cabbage, and Hamburgers became Windsor steaks. Well, recently, General Sice, the High Commissioner of Free French Africa who is in our country, was having lunch at the Algonquin, and happened to notice, to his distress, that the first item on the menu was, 'Potage Vieillesse.' He curled a finger in the direction of Frank Case, the proprietor, and indicated the dread word 'Vichy.' In a twinkling, Mr. Case changed the name to 'Potage au Gaulle.' General Sice, incidentally, is the author of a book to be published some time in June, called 'Miracle on the Concorde' reported from the Free French Front.

Miss Kathleen Mallory, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Mallory 16th Street, Virginia Beach, received the "Cooke" award at the commencement exercises of the Willoughby T. Cooke School on June 23rd. This award is given by Mrs. Willoughby T. Cooke each year to the pupil making the highest average for the three years in this school. Miss Mallory plans to enter Oceana High School next year taking a College preparatory course.

Blackout Precautions Need Careful Study

N. J. Governor Advocates
"Light-Ups" for War Production

Except at times when there is an actual air raid, the reduction of street lighting for dim-outs or blackouts is defeating our primary job of production war goods, according to Governor Charles Edison of New Jersey. Writing for New Jersey Municipalities, he quotes the recent specifications of the United States Army Engineers Board on the necessity for keeping present street lighting in use, and possibly improving it in certain localities.

"Normal street lighting will prevail except when blackouts are ordered by proper military authorities. Any curtailment of present street illumination at other times is not recommended. Reduction in lamp current, size or number of street lamps simply results in added traffic hazard without any significant decrease in case of detection and identification from the air."

Governor Edison cautions communities, hastily preparing for possible air raids with elaborate plans for blacking out, to get official approval first. "Blackout lighting should be supplementary lighting, used only when ordered by proper authority," he says. He mentions the attempt of one agency to dim protective lighting around manufacturing plants with blue shields. The result, according to Edison, was that the light gave no protection to the plants and was of little value as blackout equipment.

He says that New Jersey has expended millions of dollars and much labor on a study of the application of light upon streets and highways. Through definite accident prevention, the program has justified the expense and trouble.

Preventable night accidents are costing 206,000,000 man-hours a year, Edison states. Translated into terms of the products of our war factories and shipyards, this means six battleships, 6,000 heavy bombers or 25,000 trainer planes.

Properly lighted roads leading to our defense plants are a major cause for this loss in manpower. "Blackouts for hiding and light-ups for safety" is the slogan he suggested for the sensible application of thoroughfare lighting during the war.

The amount of power used in lighting dangerous sections of our streets and highways would be only four-tenths of one percent, he claims. And the attitude of Donald M. Nelson, War Production Board chief, toward street and highway illumination was illustrated during the water shortage in seven Southern states last summer, which brought about a severe rationing of electric power. Among the essential civilian services exempted from the provisions of a WPB limitation order on the use of electricity in those states was highway lighting maintained by municipal, county and state governments as well as that provided by the federal government.

Edison recalled President Roosevelt's proclamation of last August in which "maximum safety twenty-four hours a day—not only at work, but also on the highway, at home, everywhere" was urged. He predicts that, with the necessity for three shifts a day on the production front, night traffic accidents for the next twelve months will increase.

IF IN DOUBT, PUT IT OUT

Civilian lighting experts who have been advising the Army in connection with the dimout have been scratching their heads, and Army spokesman said, "for some way to bring home to the average householder the importance of shielding his windows to prevent light from escaping."

Cities and towns as much as fifty to a hundred miles inland have been found to contribute to the sky glow that has been of such murderous help to U-boat captains in silhouetting ships against the horizon, these experts have informed the Army. The slogan suggested by Major Gen. T. A. Terry, commanding the Second Corps Area, is still good: "If in doubt, put it out!"

HUNTING, FISHING LICENSES EXPIRE

A reminder to Virginia sportsmen that their present hunting and fishing licenses will expire on June 30 was issued today by M. D. Hart, Executive Secretary of the Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries. The new 1942-43 licenses will be required on and after July 1.

The new licenses may be obtained from the clerks of the corporation courts of cities, and from the Clerks of the circuit courts of counties. Game wardens, magistrates, and other such persons are not authorized to issue the licenses or to accept money for the licenses.

"No receipt, affidavit or other such document can take the place of the official hunting or fishing licenses which hunters and fishermen are required by law to carry on their person," Mr. Hart pointed out. "The fact that the money for the required license has been sent to the proper clerk cannot be accepted by a game warden as authorizing any person to hunt or fish without license."

Landowners Excepted

Landowners, their wives or husbands and children, are not required to have a license to hunt or fish upon their own lands or waters, and tenants, renters and lessees are permitted to hunt or fish upon the lands or waters on which they are tenant, renter, or lessee and on which they reside, without a license according to the Virginia game, inland fish, and dog laws.

Resident persons under sixteen years of age are not required to have a license to fish. No license is required of a resident to fish in the county in which he resides, or to fish in the city in which he resides, provided he does not fish with rod and reel, or with artificial lures or minnows for bait, and provided he does not fish for bass or trout.

All other persons who hunt or fish on the lands or inland waters of Virginia are required to obtain a license to do so, and to carry the correct license at all times while hunting or fishing.

Recreation Ramblings

BEACH PLAY SCHOOL: In spite of the big canvas shelter there are a lot of red backs and noses as a result of the Beach Play School which opened with a bang last week. . . . June McTernon and Billy Bell are assisting Mrs. W. N. Wibel with the seventeen children registered this week. . . . Sand-modelling, musical games and storytelling are some of the features with a mid-morning rest period for milk and crackers. . . . Remember to register your tiny tot by calling 1330-3.

LITTLE THEATRE NOTES: Walter Tupper Jones, Director of the Beach Players announces a final and complete cast for the production, "Pure As the Driven Snow," to be given a week hence. In the cast are Peggy Rumble as the chaste and chased young heroine. . . . Roger Lang who runs a hotel, Carol Simpson who runs everything. . . . E. J. Kelly, the brave and manly bodied hero. . . . Robert B. Taylor, a wolf in any sort of clothing. . . . Sam Myers, Jr., an unwilling tool. . . . Allen Tyler as the son of the owner of Pickens Pickles. . . . Doris Bell, the hard-hearted snob. . . . Also, Constance Mason, Connie Crockett, Joan Edwards, Betsy Withers, and Maybelle E. Lubert.

True melodrama is the theme of this production, but between acts, a bar-room quartette, reminiscent of the Gay Nineties, and composed of Carl Porsberg, J. T. Crosswhite, Frank L. Pentross and Joseph B. Clower will render some smooth vocalizing on the old favorites.

OCEAN FRONT: Many cottages and hotels are joining in the Recreation League which will provide amusement for summer visitors. Main attractions are volleyball, softball, archery, the Beach Play School, and the exercise classes. Riding parties will be arranged upon application. . . . With the blackout along the ocean front, the League will play a large part in keeping the crowd entertained during the day time. In fact, the Virginia Beach Department of Recreation is stressing day-time leisure time pursuits for the duration.

Openings For Army Glider Pilots

Army glider pilot training has been opened to a "limited number" of men without previous aerial instruction. Lieutenant Colonel Leland W. Skaggs, army district recruiting officer, announced yesterday.

Up until this week, this training was available only to graduates of Civil Pilot Training schools, holders of CAA private airman certificates which had not lapsed prior to January 1, 1941, former Aviation Cadets with 50 hours in training planes, or applicants able to submit satisfactory evidence of participation in at least 200 glider flights. But now the Third Corps Area, in which Virginia is included, will enroll men without previous training. The deadline is June 22.

Applicants must make a grade of at least 65 on the Aviation Cadet mental screening tests (the passing grade for Aviation Cadets is 80). They must also qualify physically. Their vision can be as low as 20-40 without glasses, correctable up to 20-20.

Qualified men will be enlisted in the Air Corps as privates and will be appointed aviation students. They will spend five weeks learning to fly airplanes, three weeks practicing deadstick landings in light planes, and two weeks of actual glider flying. Upon successful completion

$500,000 Price
U. S. Will Pay
For Chamberlin

Another Tidewater Virginia landmark gives way to the Army. Old Point Comfort, since the days after the Civil War has been a swank resort. An old Indian Chief and some of his braves were held captive there and curious tourists from far and near came to see them. Finding the climate and surroundings desirable for a summer resort, the location soon spread far and wide and ere long some enterprising men built a hotel to take care of the visitors. The "Old Chamberlain Hotel" was the scene of many brilliant military social events during the last World War. This was destroyed by fire in 1920. In 1927, on the site of the Old Chamberlain the present one was erected. Since 1932 this hostelry has been in receivership and has been operated by holding companies, the last of which was headed by Sidney Banks, former managing director of the Cavalier Hotel. On New Year's eve this was taken over by the Navy Department as a war measure. Settlement of the price question, which has been under consideration for several months, was finally reached last week in a conference in the office of Judge Luther B. Way of the Federal District court. The amount of $500,000 was set as a fair market value in an agreement reached among Sterling Hutcheson, United States District Attorney, receivers for the hostelry and the Chamberlain Operating Company, for the Federal Government to pay. Now the hotel caters only to transient officers of the Army and Navy and their families.

Unclaimed Deposits
To Buy War Bonds

Hyman Weinstein, horticulturist and native of Massillon, Ohio, has found time apart from the routine labors of his chosen profession to conceive a plan which he believes would be the greatest boost to United States war effort in the matter of dollars yet introduced.

Mr. Weinstein raises plants and bulbs in both Virginia and Maryland but has taken time to investigate the amount of unclaimed deposits in the National Banks of this country. There is over $300,000,000 of this money and the plan suggested by Mr. Weinstein is that the trustees of the banks would purchase War Bonds with the unclaimed deposits and following the war period redeem the government bonds to make government guaranteed loans at 3 per cent to worthy youths who desire to enter colleges.

The cost to the government would be small with the government paying only 1 per cent of the 3 per cent rate as suggested by Mr. Weinstein. Since he would expect only about 1 per cent of the available $300,000,000 to be used each year, the government contribution would be negligible.

The banks would get a nominal fee for their services and thousands of youths would prosper from the loans while during the war period the government could receive a substantial boost to its defense war bond purchases.

Ald to Education
Mr. Weinstein pointed out that when the war is over and many youths would—as in other post-war periods—seek entry into the nation's colleges and universities, the loans would be a substantial aid in enabling them to do so. This plan has not met with the greatest enthusiasm by the Congressmen but he has such confidence in it that he is continuing his efforts to that end. He challenges anyone to find any particular clause in his plan by which he might personally benefit, declaring that the sole purpose in the idea was to benefit students seeking college entrance in post-war days.

Can anyone be happy in these times?

Wasted money is wasted lives. Don't waste precious lives. Every dollar you can spare should be used to buy War Bonds. Buy your ten percent every pay day.

A desperate appeal for workers is being made.

Sugarless Desserts

When it comes to sugar rationing the American housewife is, traditionally, an old hand at the game. Some learned to cook with sugar substitutes during the First World War. Others know it just by hearsay. But either way, it's so much a part of our kitchen heritage that we can all take to it without much effort. For, except for about the past fifty years we've nearly always been on short sugar rations in this country. Not that we didn't have our sweets. Indeed no! We had the reputation of eating more sweets than any other nation in the world.

While our people were leading active outdoor lives—clearing forests, building cities, laying railroads, logging, farming—folks needed sweets for extra strength to keep them going. But they used sweets from their native fields and forests—molasses, sorghum, honey, maple sugar, and fruits both fresh and dried. White sugar was a luxury product imported from the Deep South or the Indies, which frontier housewives rarely had much of, to "do" with, then. Throughout the Middle West in those days it was a commonplace to be offered "long sweet'nin'" or "short sweet'nin'" in your tea or coffee—which simply meant you could choose between molasses or brown sugar.

Frontier housewives learned to use the foods they had on hand, and so can we today. We can sweeten with molasses, honey, and corn syrup, and use such prepared fruits as jellies, apple butter, puddings, and mince meat to add seasonings and spice to our desserts. Here's how:

Rich Indian Pudding
Pour—
1 cup milk, scalded
Over—
1/2 cup corn meal
Add, combining well—
1 (1-pound) can mince meat
1/2 cup molasses
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 egg, slightly beaten.
Pour into a greased cake pan (8"x8") and bake in a moderate oven (350° F.) for 60 minutes. Serve with milk. Serves 8.

Apple Macaroon Pudding
Beat—
1 egg
Add, mixing well—
1/2 cup pure apple butter
1 cup milk
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup chopped nut meats
1 dozen almond macaroons, broken into small pieces.
Pour into a buttered casserole and bake in a moderate oven (350° F.) 35 minutes or until firm in center. Serves 6.

Raspberry Grape Freeze
Combine—
1/2 glass grape jelly
1/2 cup water
1 pint raspberries (fresh or frozen). Simmer for 2 minutes, then press through a sieve to remove seeds.

Add—
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1/2 teaspoon salt. Freeze until mushy, then beat until foamy. Whip separately, then fold together and combine with raspberry mixture—
1/2 cup whipping cream
1 egg white.
Freeze quickly until firm. Serves 5.

NEWS OF THE WEEK IN REVIEW

The United States Secretary of the Treasury, Henry Morgenthau, Jr., does not believe that high pressure methods are necessary to sell war bonds and stamps.

The Secretary didn't attempt to conceal his pleasure over the success within the motor industry in putting its plan of wage reductions for bonds over the top. He said to General Motors: "The goal you have set for yourselves is indicative of the results which can be obtained when employees and employers work as one mind toward the interests of our country." Mr. Morgenthau stated further that the success of his preliminary experiment showed very clearly that the "employees want to hold an investment in our war effort, and I have confidence that their goal of 100 per cent participation each month throughout the war will be maintained to help meet the increased demands of our gigantic war machine which require we raise a billion dollars each month."

The Treasury takes the position that the financial support of the citizenry is definitely behind the voluntary war roll plan. In that case you don't have to buy bonds but you probably will agree with the head of the Treasury and "want to hold an investment in our war effort."

The latest news reports received in Washington indicate that several thousand firms are participating in the voluntary war roll for investments in war bonds. Postoffices and banks all over the country are adding additional testimony to the news that the Treasury is being backed by the American people.

THREE-CORNERED ROW

It is generally estimated that there are 11,000,000 union members in the United States. A dozen years ago there was only one great union—the American Federation of Labor, now headed by William Green.

When John L. Lewis became the thorn in Green's flesh he raised the issue of "industrial unionism" versus "AFL crafts." Lewis got aboard the NRA, which matched his pattern for "industrial unionism." In recent years CIO has gathered in a total membership that put it in the same class with AFL. The two organizations seemed to hate each other.

Finally, after the last Presidential election John L. Lewis voluntarily retired as president of the CIO, devoted his talents to United Mine Workers and succeeded in landing his entire coal miner membership into a "closed shop" with full Government recognition. Philip Murray succeeded Lewis as President of CIO. Lewis had grown to regard himself as a sort of a patriarchal counselor, and he may have had the best of intentions when he addressed Presidents Green and Murray and recommended that they get together, kiss and make up. Both resented Lewis' suggestion, and when President Roosevelt agreed with them "that Lewis was talking out of turn, the puns of AFL-CIO started shooting at Lewis' fortress. After the noise piped down Lewis and Murray began calling each other, "you're 'nuther'."

They are still at it, quarreling in the wide open places about more than a million dollars that Lewis claims CIO owes the Miners Union, and Murray demanding that Lewis' Miners union must pay CIO several months back dues for 435,000 coal miners. The three-cornered quarrel could be entertaining in times of less stress.

The really serious part of these internal explosions is that they seem to furnish fresh threats against the continuance of peaceful relations between management and workers in many places, and in establishments where planes, bombers, tanks, ships, and other activities in production must not be interrupted or stopped at this time.

ONLY IN THE EAST

"No Nation-wide rationing of gasoline!" Thus, yelled Congressmen early this month, and the chorus gradually deepened by the middle of June.

The indications in Washington, as this item is written, are for continuance of rationing in the East, but nowhere else.

INDUSTRIAL RELATIONS

The building of war materials is providing American industry with the greatest opportunity it has had since the beginning of mass production techniques to create a sound basis of permanent understanding with the average worker. George W. Wilson, vice-president of International Correspondence Schools, said in reviewing co-operative training agreements held by the schools with 3,300 leading companies.

"A degree of unity is being achieved in war production plants and factories that will be the basis for sound industrial relations ships when the war ends," Mr. Wilson said. "Workers are more eager to understand management. Management is making a real effort to acquaint employees with many facts heretofore not made available to them."

"Obviously, every worker in the nation knows by now that this is a war of production, and that victory for the Allied Nations depends largely upon the efficiency and speed shown by our industrial plants. Likewise every worker knows in what manner the product he is helping to build will be used. In most instances, he knows where the product will be used. He also realizes, or should, that he will have to pay the costs of this war. In a very real sense he is helping pay for the very thing he is helping produce. There is not much question about profits by either the company or its management."

TRAILERS CONSERVE RUBBER

The entire country is aware of the fact that every pound of rubber must be utilized to its maximum efficiency. At the same time highway transportation must go on. President Roosevelt, Donald Nelson, Chairman of the War Production Board, General Somervell, War Department Service have all stressed the importance of highway transportation in connection with the war effort. Much of the economic life of the nation depends on products transported over the roads.

These vehicles travel on rubber; consequently it is necessary to scrutinize carefully how they are employing this precious product. Harvey C. Fruehauf recently disclosed some interesting facts regarding the value of the truck and trailer combination as a conservator of not only rubber but also steel. He states:

"A truck and trailer combination with a load capacity of 11 tons—more than twice that transported on even heavier trucks—requires 1180 pounds of tires.

"The two trucks required to secure the same load capacity require 1416 pounds of tires. In other words the truck and trailer combination saves 16.6 per cent in tires. The truck-trailer combination would take ten 9.00 x 20 tires. The two trucks would take twelve 9.00 x 20 tires.

"Correspondingly the weight of the empty truck and trailer combination less tires is 12,417 pounds while the weight of the two trucks empty less tires is 16,638 pounds. For the same load capacity the truck and trailer saves 25.3 per cent in steel and other essential metals.

"Professional haulers know this. For them it means lower costs with bigger pay-loads so for that reason more than 90 per cent of the inter-state truck freight is transported by trailer in this country. It is interesting to know this when you see one of those big truck and trailer combinations on the highway transporting goods for Uncle Sam or for Mr. and Mrs. America. Here is a form of transportation which actually is conserving the materials so vital to the winning of this war."

As Others See It

voluntarily keep the Home Front firm. But what does this mean in actual fact? How can it be done? It is very simple. It is something that every family, no matter how restricted its circumstances, can do.

First let the whole family talk their particular problem out. It is a job for all, children and adults alike.

Work out a budget deciding how and what each one will give up for a family backlog of War Bonds.

Decide in what way each member of the family may cooperate in a program of conservation, in the elimination of waste, in the utilization of all the family resources, whether they be in material or ability.

Determine upon a program of time—service, so that each may give to the communal war work in accordance with his or her capacity; those who can serve, serving, and those who are too young, helping in their own way by doing for themselves and others, so that the older members of the family may have more free time to serve.

Conserve morale by keeping cheerful and happy. Shared sacrifice is no sacrifice. Working together as a family is fun. If work is done with a glad heart.

Last, but not least, keep the light of faith glowing. Live up to your best beliefs. Keep hatred, suspicion, resentment, prejudice, from your hearts. Learn not to be swayed by those for whom they probably are—players in the Axis game of "Divide and Conquer." Pray for Victory—but pray for a Victory not for yourselves alone, but for all the peoples of all the world—a Victory which will mean the four freedoms—the freedom of speech, expression and religion, the freedoms from want and fear for all the world.

To win this war and to achieve Victory, there must be no retreat on the Home Front!

BEWILDERING UNITY

(Portsmouth Star)

"I make the following findings of fact . . .

"That the Communist party of the U. S. A., from the time of its inception in 1919 to the present time, is an organization that believes in, advises, advocates, and teaches the overthrow by force and violence of the government of the United States. . . ."

—Attorney General Francis Biddle, in the Harry R. Bridges decision.

Earl Browder had been freed from Atlanta, two weeks earlier, by President Roosevelt in order to promote national unity.

Throughout the period when the Communist party of the U. S. A. was advocating the overthrow of our government by force and violence, Earl Browder was an important member. For some 11 years of that time he was the party's secretary-general, its topmost leader in this country.

We're still unified, and terribly bewildered.

LET'S STOP THIS—FAST

There are so many war secrets nowadays that the layman can't apply intelligent perspective to the military facts he does learn. Therefore it is difficult to appraise properly the disturbing criticisms made by Col. Hugh J. Kner, U. S. A., retired, in the June American Mercury.

Colonel Kner charges flatly that, in spite of promises made to the public, our "supreme commanders" in the Canal Zone, in the Southwest Pacific, at Pearl Harbor and other strategic places are being hamstrung by split decisions, he intimates, are potentially as harmful as the "Al" phone-Gaston disaster at Pearl Harbor. They result from the same indefensible jealousy among the armed services that added months or years to this war by permitting the Japs temporarily to wreck our Hawaiian fighting plant.

There is nothing academic about the problem which Colonel Kner discusses. If what he says, based upon facts which have appeared in print or are "quite generally known," is true, we may be heading for another debacle worse even than Pearl Harbor.

After Lt.-Gen. Frank M. Andrews, a capable airman, had been given "full responsibility" for defense of the Canal Zone, Colonel Kner says, the Navy "went to work" and stripped him of control over certain outposts without which the Canal cannot properly be protected.

THE POCKETBOOK OF KNOWLEDGE

The Navy acquired command over operations in the Windward Islands area, from Puerto Rico to Trinidad, through which a hostile plane carrier would have to sneak by daylight in order to reach the Canal at night for a dawn attack.

On the Pacific side, Colonel Knerr claims to know that the Navy has at times even refused to give General Andrews information "essential for his defense plans."

General Andrews is responsible, but does not control the scouting services without which he cannot know when and by what type and strength of force an attack is upon him.

General MacArthur has "supreme command" and "full responsibility" in the whole Australian sector. Colonel Knerr argues that the likely Japanese approach is by way of New Zealand. So the New Zealand sector has been given into Navy jurisdiction.

Even in Pearl Harbor itself, Colonel Knerr alleges, there is a three-way split in command notwithstanding the lesson we supposed we had learned from the episode which resulted in charges against Admiral Kimmel and General Short.

If even half of what Colonel Knerr states as published or "quite generally known" fact is true, no American can rest easy until President Roosevelt takes drastic action.

This isn't a game between Army and Navy, with the loser's goal posts as prize. This is total war, for the survival of democracy in this world.

MR. BYRD WANTS SUGAR

(Farmville News)

Senator Harry F. Byrd has addressed a letter to Leon Henderson, OPA head, asking that more sugar be made available to the farm wife for canning of fruits and for preserving and making jellies. "Canned fruits and preserves constitute one of the major items in the diet of most of the farmers of Virginia," Mr. Byrd wrote. Mr. Byrd suggests that sugar rationing be decentralized in order that tires and gasoline be saved the consumer by the present necessity of traveling long distances to obtain rationcards. Mr. Byrd sees valuable food lost if sufficient sugar is not made available immediately during the small fruit season.

Mr. Byrd is correct in the need and if the sugar can be spared without curtailment of the war effort, we hope Mr. Henderson will make sufficient sugar available for this purpose. We think some system with less red tape could be devised in this emergency. The farm wives are thrifty, are patriotic, and will turn every ounce of sugar to the greatest advantage in saving the fruits now available into food for winter ahead. We hope that sugar may be found for this important use.

Don't be a "jackrabbit driver" by swooping ahead as soon as the light turns green—this may waste one gallon of gasoline out of every four.

of a given area with produce of that area—Michigan apples for detrolers, for instance, instead of swapping with Seattle residents for State of Washington apples. Meanwhile an example of war efficiency of the day-to-day efficiency of modern mass distribution of food comes in a report that at one of the A&P's big division warehouse points, more than 60 per cent of all railway cars received are moved in, unloaded and sent on their way again in less than 24 hours.

MILESTONE—John and Jane Taxpayer apparently hurdled the second-quarter barrier in the income-tax sweepstakes "in stride." Reports from the bands and personal finance companies indicate the two-and-a-quarter billion was wrangled together with less resorting to loans and savings withdrawals than the first installment, back in March. One factor that helps bring this about is that a number of companies have arranged so that various special payments and bonuses to employees are paid just before the quarterly income-tax due dates.

SHORT CUTS—The "whole-sale" specifying and ordering of giant buildings and giant building tools—on a scale hardly even imagined in peace time—is given part credit for the speed with which aluminum plants are getting into operation. These examples are cited by Thomas D. Jolly, chief engineer of Aluminum Company of America in charge of building Alcoa's own plants and the 16 it is putting up for the government: Ordering 475 cranes of the same span and capacity "all at once" enabled the crane builder to put that job on a production-line basis and increase efficiency 50 per cent. . . . Erecting 72 buildings from the same set of drawings helped the company put 335 acres of floor space under roof since January 1, 1940. (That area is enough to accommodate 253 football fields, including the end zones). (Another time-saving maneuver was the borrowing of 13,000 tons of silver from the U. S. Treasury, for use in lieu of the less "precious" but far more war-scarce copper. The silver'll go back to the vaults when the war's over.

CHECK-UP—Eastern seaboard states checked up after a month of gas rationing, found: highway accidents had dropped off by half in some areas; traffic fatalities decreased by up to 40 per cent; juvenile delinquency abated as parents refused to let Junior have the car; toll bridges suffered terrific drops in revenue, in some cases as high as 75 per cent; service stations withered or died (in Rhode Island, half of them were forced to close);

The simplest type of flushing bar consists of a horizontal pole from which knotted ropes or pieces of chain are suspended. The pole is attached to the mower or to the team's harness in such a way that the ropes or chains are dragged well ahead of the moving knives. With this device blades are flushed soon enough to allow the blades to be raised before passing over the nest. Quail frequently return and continue to incubate the eggs in a nest around which a small "island" of unsuit vegetation is left.

and golf, minor league baseball and seaside resorts were seriously crippled. Now the OPA is considering a three-cents-a-gallon boost in retail gasoline prices in these states, to help meet the added oil transportation costs. The theory is that I would be less of a cost-of-living booster to tack it on there than to add it to fuel oil prices.

Federal Auto Use "Tax stamps should be placed in front of the rear view mirror on the windshield, Colonel M. S. Battle, Director of the Division of Motor Vehicles, said today.

These stamps are on sale now at post offices, and must be purchased before July 1, according to law, the director said. They cost $5.00 and are good for the next twelve months.

"We want to prevent any obstruction to the driver's view," Colonel Battle said, "and the Federal authorities want the sticker in a uniform place so that it will be easy to see. We feel that the 'blind spot' on the windshield in front of the mirror is the best location."

The new stamps are gummed on the face instead of the back as the ones placed on sale last February were, and owners have to write on the back, so the stamps should go on the glass instead of the mirror this time, Colonel Battle said. Owners who put the stamps elsewhere on the car may be inconvenienced by being stopped to show their stamp, he added.

Farmers Urged To Save Nesting Birds

Richmond, June 23.—With the coming of the peak of the broodwise quail nesting season farmers should be "extraordinarily careful not to destroy the eggs of these ground-nesting game birds, according to officials of the Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries. Nests and nesting birds can be protected by preventing dogs and cats from running at large and by using "flushing bars" or other devices to locate the quail before they are run over by a mower, game officials point out.

The simplest type of flushing bar consists of a horizontal pole from which knotted ropes or pieces of chain are suspended. The pole is attached to the mower or to the team's harness in such a way that the ropes or chains are dragged well ahead of the moving knives. With this device blades are flushed soon enough to allow the blades to be raised before passing over the nest. Quail frequently return and continue to incubate the eggs in a nest around which a small "island" of unsuit vegetation is left.

HEALTH NOTES

SUNBURN

"The intense affection that thousands seasonally display toward the sun at summer resorts inevitable results in varying degrees of sunburn. Despite repeated warnings and personal experience, many persons who abruptly leave office or home for an excursion to lake, sea, mountain or river just as abruptly expose their faces, shoulders and legs to the merciless rays of the sun. Such persons persist in laboring under the misguided and painfully disproven notion that the skin of a human being which has been protected against sun, wind and weather for a stretch of fifty weeks promptly can acquire a tan by exposing it immediately to the sun for a long and sustained stretch. This procedure always creates burns and, in some severe cases, disabling illnesses, but it does not produce a tan," states Dr. I. C. Riggin, State Health Commissioner.

"If undisciplined children were the offenders, possibly there might be some excuse for this type of casualty. However, the fact is that this desire for a quick suntan seems to be a favorite objective of vacationing adults; and this, despite their proven intelligence and judgment when engaged in their daily pursuits at home. xx

"Many young and middle-aged men and women, under the spell of the annual outing, thus attempt to short-cut nature by way of undue exposure to the sun, with the result that they merely short-cut themselves. The pleasures of the yearly performance are reduced by such a performance is the least penalty that can be expected. Downright illness, even hospitalization, frequently follows in the wake of fanatical sun worshiping.

"In healthy persons, sunshine can be a real asset. The secret of its value lies in the discriminating way it is handled. To the skin which has been protected against sunshine for a long time, fifteen or twenty minutes should be the maximum first-time exposure. The epidermis of some persons reacts unfavorably to that length of time. However, provided no burn results, the daily dosage can be increased five to fifteen minutes, thus giving the pigmentation process time to do its work effectively.

"By feeling one's way with the sun, a healthy tan will develop; the possibility of pain and suffering from undue exposure will be avoided, and the desire for that 'just back from your vacation' appearance will have been completely fulfilled.

"In short, to worship the sun on the annual vacation is both a psychological and physical tonic provided that the restraint periodically demanded by nature is adhered to strictly. No other attitude will pay."

The bombing of homes, churches and factories is intended to wreck civilian morale. But remember that homes, churches, and factories can be wrecked by selfishness too. And that's just as bad for morale. Sometimes its worse.

Park your car in the shade when you can—gasoline evaporates much quicker in the sun.

Keep your car in good mechanical condition—if your motor doesn't knock a little on inclines, you are wasting gas.

THE HOME FRONT

We have taken in our belts, we have tightened our economy to that almost nothing might be useful in war is wasted on the non-essentials of ordinary living. Now we are fighting another sort of waste which we can afford as little as we can afford waste of materials. We are fighting the waste of what we call "Manpower" but which actually embraces almost every one—man or woman or adolescent child in the U. S. A.

The Manpower Mobilization Program, with its aim of seeing that everyone has a job and that each is doing the job for which he or she is best fitted, is one attack on the problem of manpower waste. Another line of attack has been stressed recently in messages from the President himself, and from Paul V. McNutt, Director of the Office of Defense Health and Welfare Services and chairman of the War Manpower Commission. This line of attack hits at the waste of industrial manpower caused by ill health. Ill health is an enemy on the production front fully as much as on the field of battle. The Japanese on Bataan were fought by malarial fevers, which aided by their against our troops in the steaming jungles of that Peninsula. The Japs and the Nazis are aided by the disease and illness which fights on their side in the war production centers of America.

Good Health Compulsory

But the compulsion to remain fit extends beyond the factory front—it is a compulsion laid upon all of us. Indifferent health means indifferent morale, and indifferent morale is an invitation to defeat. The weapons with which ill health is fought on the home front are weapons known to every housewife—proper food, proper exercise, and proper rest. On the industrial front the problem is complicated by other factors. Several weeks before Mr. McNutt transmitted the President's message on health and morale to some 8,500 key executives in war production plants, the six Government officials most directly concerned with increasing our output for war appealed to War Production Committees in more than 900 plants to fight sickness and accidents. Their joint statement pointed out, that sickness and injury lost 6,000,000 work days every month—work days which might otherwise have brought victory over the Axis that much nearer. And it pointed out the need for active public health departments in every community, with enough doctors, nurses, and hospital beds to care for workers and their families.

The President, commending Government and community efforts to improve health and morale, emphasized the need for eliminating from war industry centers, that "major source of infection" the Red-Light District, just as such districts have been eliminated from the neighborhood of Army camps and Naval stations. And the War Manpower Commission chairman, addressing "war industry executives" called venereal diseases one of the most menacing of the hazards to the health of workers, added that "many millions of lost work days could be saved and . . . Needless accidents and collapse of materials . . . prevented, with improvement to workers' health."

Drives Seek Rubber, Tin We are in the midst of a brief and concentrated drive to get all the scrap rubber we can back to the reclaiming plants. We are launching another drive to collect tin cans so that we may have tin for bushings which reduce friction in the engines of our military aircraft and for other vital military purposes. Response to these drives once more emphasizes our united effort against the common enemy.

To most of us this unity was to be taken for granted but there were those, both before and after Pearl Harbor, who thought and spoke differently. These people said we were not alert to the danger, they said we could not convert our industries to war in time to help our allies, they said we could not give our sons freely to the fight for freedom, that we were too soft to accept rationing, price fixing, and those other measures which meant for all of us an end to "living as usual." But almost every day that goes by disproves these lies, affords additional proof of our unity in endeavor, a unity to strike terror to the heart of our foe. Probably the most striking proof of unity on the home front has been the signal success of the War Production Drive, a drive which could not have succeeded without the whole-hearted collaboration of management and the worker. Many thought, when the War Production Drive was first announced, that management and labor could not work together even to get more tanks and guns and planes and ships and get them faster, but today joint committees of management and labor are working together in more than 900 plants of war production and neither side—neither the side of management nor the side of labor has tried to use the plan to chisel something out of the other fellow.

Seek Honest Answers

The committees tried honestly to find answers to these questions—How can we get more production from our machines? How can we improve quality of workmanship? How can we prevent waste of man-hours and materials? The President's goals in ships and planes and tanks and guns hung upon the ability of these groups to find answers to these questions. And they have succeeded. That is why War Production Board Chairman, Donald M. Nelson, said last week that "there is a new spirit abroad in this land—or perhaps it is just a spirit that was always there."

And Mr. Nelson added—"America today is really beginning to work at full speed for the first time. We are just beginning to realize what our strength really is. We are just starting to use it." Berlin and Tokyo papers please copy.

Those who really "Remember Pearl Harbor" come out of the "Snug Harbor" they have fashioned for themselves in life. And they forget personal ambition, party politics and self-interest in every other form.

Democracy must be built on a framework of active, selfless and self-giving citizens whose determination to bring unity and victory cannot be altered by any beckoning of personal advantage.

We might start living 24 hours a day the ideals our boys are fighting 24 hours a day to defend.

It's sacrificial toughness of soul we need—not superficial toughness of tongue.

Defense Bond Quiz

The persistence with which some people try to drag believers in God into their campaign of hate prompts us to ask them: What do you intend to do? What can your hate build? What kind of life can it produce? What civilizations has it created? What children has it inspired? What slaves has it released? Point to your heroes and open wide the doors of your halls of fame. Tell us wherein hatred has ever honored God or man.

Will those who spread rumors, whose purpose is to make us hate, be brave enough to point to Nazi Germany as an example of what hate can do—and then come out with it and say: "There—that is what we aim at—that is what we want Christians to endorse." Will they?

If they did they would have to remind us that the people of Germany were deceived by the lies which penetrated their hearts on the wings of ugly rumors. They would unfold the stories of how the Nazis considered that when they took rights away from the Jews they were acquiring for themselves that which their Jewish brethren had lost, only to find that when the Jews lost all the Germans lost too. It has taken only nine years to demonstrate this truth. For in his last speech Hitler announced that he was assuming powers which deprived even the German Judiciary of its recognized rights!

If the bearers of evil rumors in America were courageous enough they would read to us from the pages of a recent issue of Archiv für Rassen- und Gesellschaftsbiologie in which Dr. Alfred Rosenberg, high priest of Nazi ideology writes: "On the other hand, the continuous explosions of heavy bombs are bound to unhinge mentally those whose nervous system is not as strong as it should be. Aerial bombing should, therefore, enable us to discover a number of incipient neuroathenics who in the interest of race selection and social hygiene should not be permitted to reproduce their kind. After committing them to institutions, their offspring should be sterilized."

This callous action against the German people themselves began years ago—with a lying rumor of Hate grew. It taught men to be hate. The rumor was believed, indifferent to the value of human life. Today, as it hastens to devour new victims, many people are quite ready to forget just how it got started.

Americans should not forget. The kind of society in which we believe cannot be built on hate. Justice cannot be advanced one iota by it. God cannot be honored thereby. Renounce the evil rumors. Speak "the truth in love."

FARMERS URGE TO SAVE LANDS BY LUGUM

Richmond, June 23.—Keeping the soil covered with vegetation, especially legumes, improves the soil and provides food and cover for wildlife after principal crops have been harvested, according to biologists of the Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries.

Harrowing cowpeas into wheat stubble or planting soybeans immediately after the wheat harvest, when a stand of clover or other legume is not already present, is recommended for both soil and wildlife conservation, experts agree. Wildlife technicians have found that both cowpeas and soybeans are eaten by quail, turkeys, and other game, and when these crops are available many of the natural wildlife foods are saved until the critical late winter months.

Even when the cowpeas are cut for hay, wildlife men point out, enough of the plants will reseed themselves to provide a valuable supplementary food supply for game birds.

Cooling practices recommended by the poultry husbandman at V. P. I. include: removing all glass windows from the poultry houses; leaving the doors

Aged County Woman Dies After Illness

Mrs. Emma Fletcher Litchfield, aged 80, widow of David J. Litchfield and daughter of the late Aaron and Margaret Penelton Fletcher, a native of Pasquotank County, N. C., and a resident of Princess Anne County for the past 75 years, died at the residence of her son, W. J. Litchfield, in Princess Anne, last Friday after an extended illness. She is survived by a daughter, Mrs. J. W. Ward, of Woodleigh, N. C.; two sons, W. J. Litchfield, of Princess Anne, and D. C. Litchfield of Norfolk; a sister, Mrs. J. T. Stanton, of Norfolk; 14 grandchildren, eight great-grandchildren and a number of nieces and nephews. Mrs. Litchfield was a member of St. John's Baptist church.

Funeral services were conducted at St. John's Baptist church with the pastor, the Rev. W. J. Meade, D. D., and the Rev. R. W. Mapp, pastor of Centerville Baptist church, officiating. During the services Miss Lillie Bell Woodhouse and Miss Edna Malbon sang "The Old Rugged Cross" and "Will the Circle Be Unbroken." with Miss Woodhouse as accompanist. Mr. Mapp read Tennyson's "Crossing the Bar." Pallbearers were W. T. Etheridge, J. E. Lee, Stanley Litchfield, W. C. Litchfield, T. E. Menden and E. W. Litchfield. Burial was in the family cemetery near Back Bay.

Other seasonal jobs for poultrymen are keeping lice and mites under control; encouraging growing chicks in learning to roost; allowing the layers to run out on good, clean, green range; keeping nests furnished with clean material; feeding plenty of grain to the growing stock; about two parts grain to one part growing mash; and giving both the young and laying stock plenty of fresh green feed.

Scrap Rubber

By this method of publicity the CPA hopes to deter motorists from obtaining or using cards to which they are not entitled. The CPA may disclose next week whether it will sanction an increase in gasoline prices in the Eastern shortage area in order to compensate for increased costs of transporting the fluid overland instead of by tanker. There have been reports that the increase might be three cents a gallon.

but OPA said merely that the question was being studied.

To nip any chiseling under the permanent Eastern gasoline rationing system starting July 15, every automobile will have to carry a colored sticker showing the type of rationing book held by its driver, the Office of Price Administration announced.

Those holding the basic cards will receive, at the time the cards are issued, a black sticker with a large "A" printed on it in white and the words "gasoline ration" below. "D" stickers will be green, "C" stickers red and "S" stickers, for commercial vehicles, brown.

Joel Dean, chief of OPA's fuel rationing branch, said he expected the sticker system to "prove an effective deterrent against any person obtaining and using gasoline ration books to which he is not entitled, inasmuch as he will come under constant public scrutiny."

Numerous letters have been received urging OPA to provide some means of public notice of the type of ration book issued to each car. Dean explained.

Another disclosure was that a retail price increase on gasoline in the Eastern shortage area is under study by the OPA and a decision may be announced next week.

Declining to confirm reports that the increase might be three cents a gallon, one high official said the amount had not yet been decided upon.

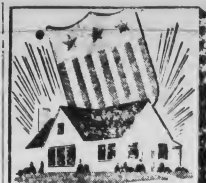

In effect, an increase would mean passing on to motorists the added cost of hauling gasoline overland instead of by tanker.

A call to all citizens of Princess Anne County Petroleum Industries Committee urging all citizens to bring in to nearby service stations all articles of discarded rubber that may be found by a thorough search through attics, basements, garages and barns. Service station operators of the country, responding to a call of President Roosevelt, are donating their time and services as collectors of scrap rubber for 16 days from June 15 to June 30. The scrap rubber can either be donated by the public, with the proceeds going to worthy war relief agencies, or the service station operators will pay one cent per pound for the scrap rubber. Uncle Sam promising to reimburse them later for such cash outlays.

"By salvaging rubber everybody can help their country to overcome a serious shortage of a vital war essential," said Mr. Koenig. "Every little scrap is worth while. A bathing cap, an old hot water bottle, an unusable tire or tube—these are the kinds of old rubber that our country needs."

"I sincerely hope that the citizens of this county will respond quickly and fully to the call of President Roosevelt and make a record for this county for which we will be proud. The service station operators are doing their bit cheerfully and gladly, and the success of the campaign, depends only on the response of the public. The oil men are ready, and they hope that each and every person in their neighborhoods will do their bit by combing thoroughly all places where scrap rubber might possibly be found."

"Everybody in Princess Anne County should cooperate fully with the gasoline rationing station men in drive for an essential war material. We can, we must, retrieve every scrap of rubber in this county and place it in the hands of Uncle Sam."
